Allied Armored Force Advance Nears Bizerte

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Nov. 19.—American and British mechanized units have smashed their way to within 35 miles of the Axis Tunisian stronghold of Bizerte after scattered clashes with German patrols.

By now the Allied troops are 25 miles inside Tunisia from the Algerian border in their swift attempt to crush the Axis both in that French protectorate and in Libya beyond.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 20.—(P) Allied troops were reported rolling deeper into Tunisia early today after British tank troops in their first armored clash with the Axis on this battleground destroyed eight of 30 Nazi tanks seeking to bar their way.

Inside Tunisia itself the French commander, General Barre, was said to have opened a general offensive of his own at dawn yesterday against the German and Italian occupying forces.

The Moroccan radio, which told of the first tank clash, said it occurred Tuesday, and the Germans withdrew after their losses.

"A few British antitank guns and heavy guns were put out of action," the radio broadcast added.

Seek to Block U. S.

Evidence that the Axis still was trying to pour as many troops as possible into Tunisia was seen in the Moroccan radio's announcement that the Nazis had landed several light tanks and 200 airborne infantry at Gabes, eastern Tunisian coastal city about 100 miles from the Libyan border.

This maneuver apparently was aimed at blocking an American column reported driving into southern Tunisia toward Gabes in an effort to encircle the Axis troops in the Bizerte-Tunis area, and also strike directly at Marshal Rommel's main base at Tripoli.

The radio said the Germans occupied the Gabes town hall and barracks despite French resistance. Gabes is near the northern end of the March "Little Maginot Line" which the French had built near the Libyan border. Most of its fortifications are said to be aimed eastward, however, toward Italian Libya since it was constructed before the war in anticipation of a possible fascist attack.

From Allied headquarters in North Africa there came a late dispatch telling of bitter aerial battles Thursday in which British Spitfires shot down at least five Axis planes from a German air force attacking squadrons which attempted to bomb the Allied armored ground forces advancing on Bizerte and Tunis. Two Spitfires were lost.

Releases Americans. A delayed dispatch direct from Rabat, where the Moroccan radio is located, confirmed that station's previous announcement that the Sultan of Morocco, and the French Resident General Nogues had pledged their co-operation to Major General Patton, United States commander in western Morocco.

This was expected to release large numbers of United States troops for the drive eastward against the Axis. French troops from the Oran region already are en route toward Tunisia to join the Allies.

The Moroccan radio's report concerning General Barre, French Tunisian commander, said that General Nehring, Axis commander, had handed Barre an ultimatum ordering the French to withdraw his command to withdraw from Tunisia or join the Axis in an attempt to stop Lieutenant General Anderson's British First Army.

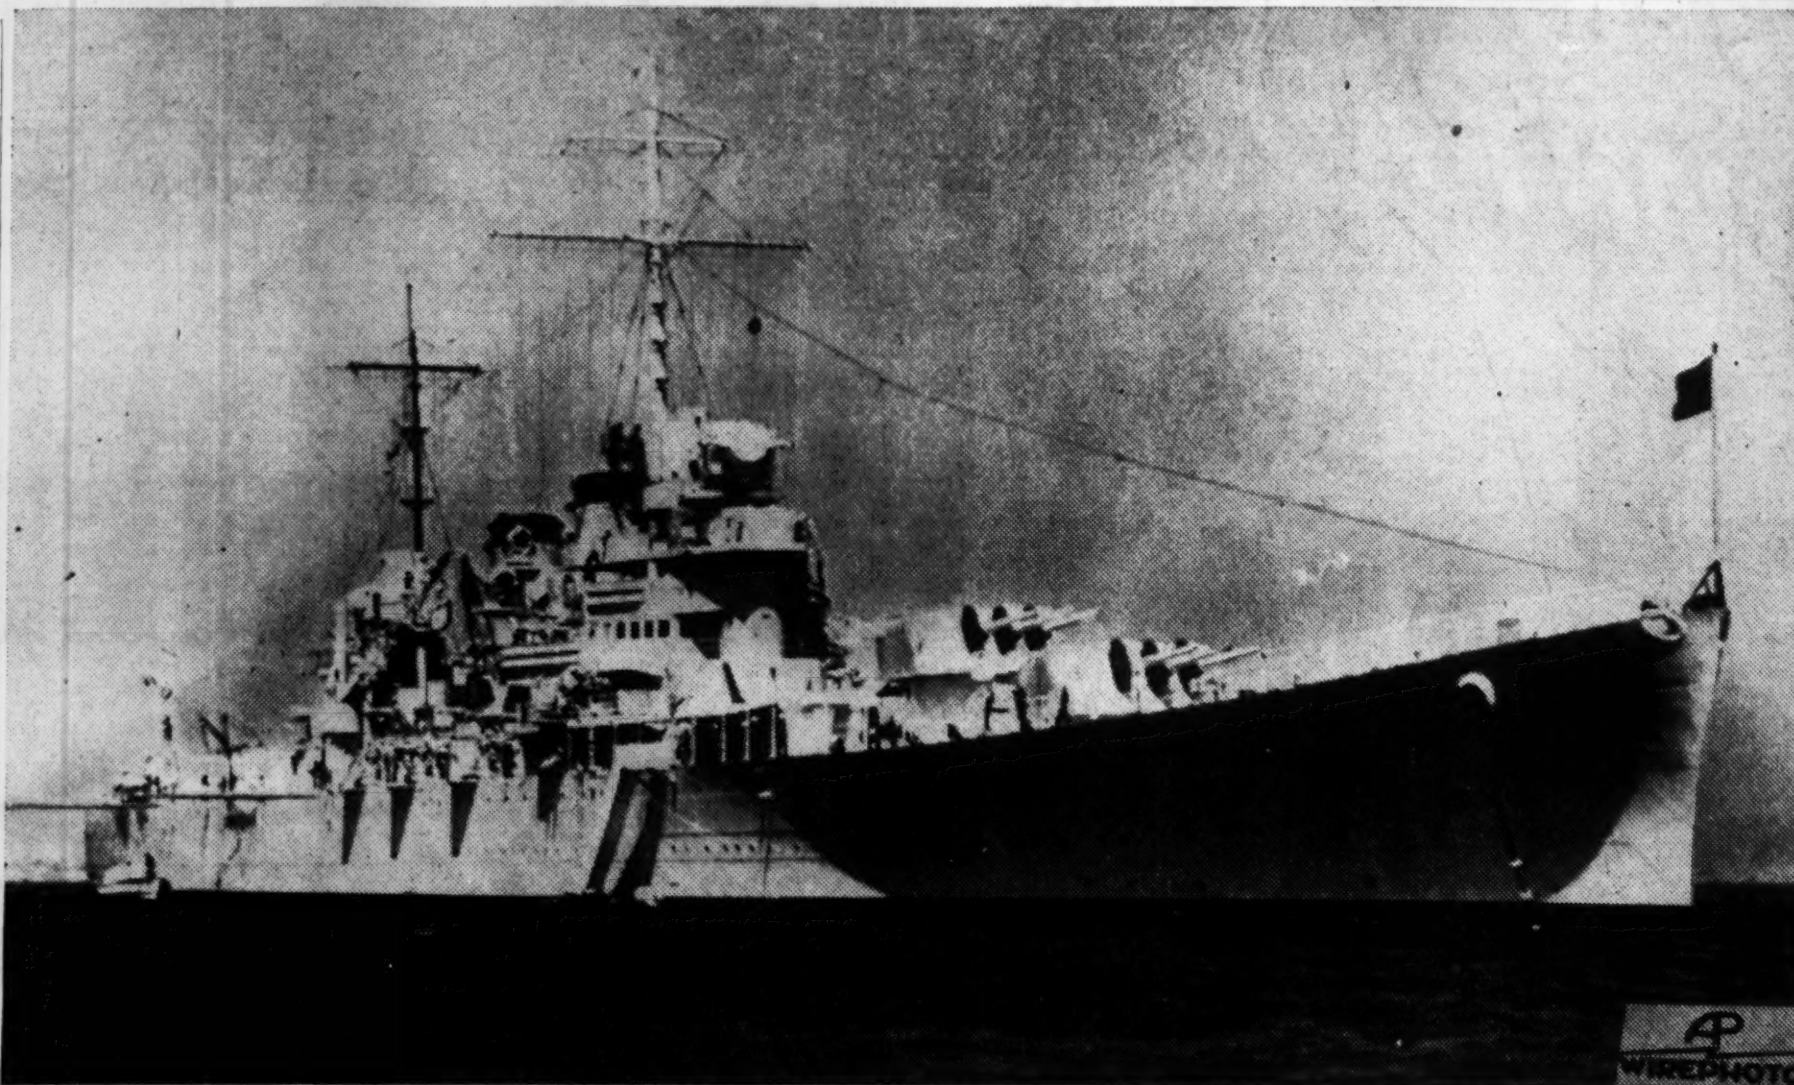

Spurning the German threat that he would be attacked if he failed to comply, the report said, General Barre ordered his provincial forces to attack first early today.

General Barre notified the Ger-

BOISE SETS BATTLE MARK—The U. S. light cruiser Boise docked at the Philadelphia

Navy Yard yesterday, home from the Solomon Islands battle zone with the extraordinary record of having been chiefly instrumental in sinking six Jap warships in a single engagement.

Torn by Jap Shells, Heroic Boise Home

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 19.—(P) The American light cruiser Boise, survivor of one of the Navy's most thrilling sagas, came home from the Solomon Islands war zone today with the unparalleled achievement of having sunk or helped to sink six Japanese warships in 27 minutes of deadly close-range firing on the night of October 11-12.

Bishop Moore Cites Progress Of Methodists

By DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT. Bishop Arthur J. Moore, president of the North Georgia Methodist conference, at the opening session for the current year declared yesterday the year to have been one of emphatic progress for Georgia Methodism.

Private individual reports made by pastors to the bishop, and corroborated by the 10 district superintendents, almost without exception indicate a great awakening of religious interest. He said the conferences composing the Atlanta Area Episcopal district have been rated second as having made greatest advances in benevolent giving for world service.

Spirited discussion and voting was indulged in by the conference group when the Rev. J. W. O. McKibben, of Decatur First church, moved that pastoral appointments be read at 2:30 o'clock next Sunday afternoon.

The Rev. George L. King, of LaGrange district, spoke in opposition, and the Rev. L. M. Twigg, of Augusta district, offered a substitute, asking that the new appointments be read at 1:15 o'clock next Sunday afternoon.

By vote of 205 to 125 the body agreed to the Twigg substitute, and Bishop

Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet, flew here from Washington to greet Captain E. J. (Mike) Moran, of San Francisco, as the 10,000-ton battle-scarred Boise, once given up for lost, docked at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

A band blared "Hold That Tiger," and sailors on nearby ships cheered and threw their hats into the air as the cruiser came in. Proudly painted on her bridge was six miniature Jap ships—her score in the night attack off Cape Esperance, near Guadalcanal. Smiling crew members lined the decks, anxious to set foot on American soil for the first time in five months.

In the engagement, the Boise was in the vanguard of a cruiser-destroyer task force that intercepted a Japanese force attempting to land troops. She fired more than 1,000 rounds of five and six-inch shells that helped destroy two

Heat Record Set For November 19

The hottest November 15 ever recorded in Atlanta was experienced yesterday when the mercury soared to 80 degrees. Forecaster Glen Jefferson said that previously the highest temperature for the same date was 77.8 degrees, recorded several years ago.

Jefferson predicted "continued unseasonably warm" weather for Atlanta today. The low reading last night was only 57 degrees.

Poison Found In Eggs as 47 Die in Oregon

SALEM, Ore., Nov. 19.—(P) A powerful mineral commonly used in insecticides was reported by investigators tonight as the poison which killed 47 inmates of the Oregon State Hospital for the Insane after they partook of a scrambled egg dinner.

Dr. J. C. Evans, hospital superintendent who made public the findings, said the poison was put into the eggs.

"Was it homicide?" he was asked.

"That I am not prepared to say," he replied.

He said Dr. Joseph Beemans, director of the Oregon state police, discovered the poison in bits of the eggs that were served to 47 inmates at dinner last night.

All were nauseated, complained of stomach cramps and paralysis of the legs. There was evidence also of respiratory paralysis.

Dr. Evans said an inmate kitchen helper assigned to prepare the eggs for cooking left the pot unattended for five or 10 minutes while he went to the basement in search of powdered milk.

It is possible, the superintendent said, that a trusty inmate could have obtained the poison at a downtown Salem drug store and put it into the batter. It is possible, also, he added, that the poison was mixed into a can or two in the packing plant in Chicago, where the consignment turned over to the asylum by the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation, originated.

Dr. Frank Menne, University of Oregon Medical School bacteriologist, who also was seeking identity of the poison, said he fed bits of eggs yolks taken at random from cans in the consignment to rats. They survived. They died in three to five minutes, however.

Tech's Antiaircraft Ready to Repel 'Raid'

By KEELER MCCARTNEY. The campus at Georgia Tech is bristling with antiaircraft guns and other defenses against dive-bombing attacks that will go into Savannah in the greatest mock battle ever staged in Atlanta.

Various types of guns, searchlights and other weapons for combatting planes will be on display today. However, officials warn spectators to return to their homes before the fireworks begin tonight.

Schoolbooks have been shelved at Tech for the "battle" and Tech students have been ordered to remain in uniform until 5:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Array of Weapons. Long columns of big trucks from the 508th Coast Artillery yesterday afternoon rolled into Tech with the grimmest array of weapons assembled here since the bloody Battle of Atlanta in the War Between the States.

The hitherto peaceful campus has been converted into a vast munitions works, theoretically an important objective for dive-bombers. Savannah has been designated an "enemy aircraft carrier," and during the maneuvers tonight a B-34 bomber will fly in to "attack" the target.

Stuka tactics will find the going tough, however, for a ring of 13 antiaircraft guns surround the campus. A number of 800,000-candlepower searchlights will send their blinding rays skyward from the first sound of an approaching plane.

Private Pilots Warned. Private and commercial planes already have been warned to steer clear of the danger zone, officials said, and citizens are ordered not to congregate on the school grounds after sundown.

All defenses at Tech have been set up to fight off the mock aircraft carrier approaching from Savannah. Antiaircraft guns will include several 4-90 mm. and 9-40 mm. pieces.

The powerful searchlights will

MacArthur Bombers Smash Two Vessels In New Guinea Area

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The great American sea victory in the Solomons assumed even more epic proportions today when the Navy announced that a Japanese battleship or heavy cruiser, three large cruisers and a destroyer were sunk and three other enemy warships, including a battleship, damaged in a single engagement last Saturday night.

These heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy by an American battleship task force, whose victory, coming on top of the smashing triumph scored two nights earlier, finally drove the enemy northward in inglorious retreat.

(It is not yet possible to reach a total of the Japanese losses because there may be some duplication between the damage listed in today's announcement and the data made public earlier in the week.)

Greatest Jap Effort. It was officially revealed that in the tremendous Solomons fight American battleships slugged it out with Japanese battleships, for the first time during the war in the Pacific.

(Another Allied success against Japan in the southwest Pacific was announced by General MacArthur, who said his heavy bombers sank a Japanese light cruiser and a destroyer as they attempted to relieve Japanese soldiers pinned against the sea in New Guinea between Buna and Gona. A third destroyer in the operation was damaged and forced to flee.

(MacArthur said his men were fighting on the outskirts of both Gona and Buna.)

Today's communique was the second giving results of the series of sea fights which ensued when the Japanese tried to attack American-held territory on Guadalcanal Island with a mighty armada of warships and transports. It was their greatest effort in amphibious warfare since the last port made clear that it failed utterly.

The first communique giving results was issued last Monday. It dealt at length with the first main battle of the series which was fought out shortly after midnight last Thursday (Guadalcanal time).

That communique listed 23 Japanese ships, including one battleship and three heavy cruisers, as having been destroyed and said seven, including a second battleship, had been damaged. It also reported that the Saturday night action had been fought, but that details "have not yet been received."

May Be Duplication. American losses were reported as two light cruisers and six destroyers sunk.

Following this up, today's communique said reports just in from the South Pacific showed that enemy losses in the Saturday night battle were one battleship or heavy cruiser, three large cruisers and one destroyer sunk, and one battleship, one cruiser and one destroyer damaged. No further American losses were reported.

The communique cautioned that "this report of damage (to the Japs) may include some of the damage already reported" in the Monday announcement. Not until a full summary of the complex action has reached here can a full evaluation of the devastation worked on the Japanese navy be made.

Should it then turn out that the Japanese actually had lost two battleships sunk and two damaged in addition to all their other losses in ships, supplies and men in the Solomons last week, there would be little question that the navy of Nippon had received a crippling blow, the effects of which would be felt until this war ends.

Severe Blow to Japs. While emphasizing that only fragmentary reports on the Saturday night battle were in, the Navy spokesman expressed the view that duplication between the two communiques probably was not extensive.

It seemed entirely possible, therefore, that of the 15 or more

5,000 Nazis Die in Soviet Counterattack

MOSCOW, Friday, Nov. 20.—(P) A counterattacking Red army killed 5,000 Germans in a battle lasting several days outside Ordzhonikidze, northern entrance to the Georgian military highway leading through the Caucasian mountains, the Soviets announced last night in a special communique.

The regular midnight war bulletin also told of stalwart Russian fighting at all other key sectors of the long front, particularly Stalingrad where six German attacks were repulsed.

In one sector of the Volga river city the Germans "succeeded in occupying a few demolished houses at a cost of great losses," but this was the only slight Nazi gain.

The Russians said they inflicted "a severe defeat" on the Germans as they approached to Ordzhonikidze.

Fighting Spreads. This was the first indication that the Caucasian fighting had reached the vicinity of Ordzhonikidze, which lies 60 miles south-east of Nalchik and about the same distance south of Moscow, previously known as centers of action.

They routed the 13th German Tank Division, the Brandenburg Regiment, the 45th Bicycle Battalion, the 25th Sapper Battalion, the 525th Division of the Nazi Antitank Defense and a battalion of the First German Infantry Division, said an official announcement read over the Moscow radio.

The Germans, the announcement said, lost more than 5,000 dead on the battlefield and the number of wounded was "several times larger."

Big Arms Taken. The Russians said they captured 140 German tanks, seven armored cars, 70 guns including 37 armor-piercing guns, and 95 mortars.

The 23rd German Tank Division and the Second Rumanian Mountain Infantry Division also were said to have suffered severe losses. Earlier dispatches said the Russians also captured several enemy fortifications south of Stalingrad while beating off German attacks within the cold, rugged Volga city, and advanced slightly in the Tuapse region near the Black sea coast.

Every other report from the 2,000-mile battlefield, much of it covered by ice, snow and thick fog, told of Russian success; nowhere were the Germans making a major effort to advance.

(The German communique suggested that the Russians had shifted from the defensive to the offensive. They claimed to have repulsed "violent new attacks" in the Nalchik area.

Swift British Unit Bypasses Hump, Perils Stragglers

By PAUL KERN LEE.

CAIRO, Nov. 19.—(AP)—A swift British column has bypassed the Libyan hump and reached a point 50 miles south of Bengasi, threatening the Axis stragglers racing desperately on today toward El Agheila for a prospective rear-guard fight for Tripolitania.

'Tailcoat' Film Is Moved to Capitol Screen

'Tales of Manhattan' Features Star-Studded Cast.

"Tales of Manhattan," 20th Century-Fox's star-studded story of the life of an expensive tailcoat, moves to the screen of the Capitol theater today for a second week in Atlanta.

In the leading roles are Charles Boyer, Rita Hayworth, Ginger Rogers, Henry Fonda, Edward G. Robinson and Charles Laughton. The story opens to find Boyer being fitted with this expensive tailcoat, the finest his tailor ever made. Boyer, a playboy actor, is killed and the coat begins its adventure. Henry Fonda and Cesar Romero claim it. For Fonda it is a charm, for Romero it is bad luck. Edward G. Robinson, a bum, wears it to a swank affair. From here the coat makes the rounds on the backs of a cross-section of people in Manhattan, finally winding up as a scarecrow in a Negro's cotton patch.

The southern arm of the pursuing British was in the Antelat section, 80 miles northeast of El Agheila and 15 miles from the Gulf of Sirte, and overlooking the coastal road from Bengasi to Agedabia.

Imperial forces in the north were pressing vigorously along the coastal road toward Bengasi while British and United States planes speeded explosive death on the disordered Axis exodus. Remnants of Marshal Erwin Rommel's force had lost most of their arms in the 600-mile flight from El Alamein.

Medium bombers based on Malta flew the Mediterranean bottleneck to Tunis and attacked the German-held airdrome from which Axis planes are operating against the eastbound British First Army's advance on Bizerte and Tunis from Algeria. Runways and hangars were hit and fires started. Malta's fighters ranged also to the Sicilian fountainhead of Axis air power for North Africa, destroying a German bomber over the big Italian island. The frantic efforts of the Germans and Italians to save something in North Africa was highlighted by the enemy's use of big transport planes to rescue men from the Bengasi area, flying them south to Magrun.

Seven Junkers-52's were shot down on their ferry route and three others were destroyed and 20 damaged on the ground at Bengasi. Earlier, in the Barce sector, a transport and a Heinkel were destroyed.

United States and British planes attacked Bengasi at dusk yesterday, starting fires. They observed several large fires already set by Axis demolition crews and two ships afire off the end of the central mole near the harbor entrance. This indicated Rommel might be trying to block the harbor.

The rapid British drive in Libya narrowed to 670 miles the distance between the Eighth Army and the southern Tunisian frontier with Algeria, and reports of a strong Fighting French column moving up the Sahara from Lake Chad toward Tripoli foreshadowed a new peril for Rommel's retreat. The French were reported to be 940 miles from Tripoli, which lies 400 miles west of El Agheila.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 19.—(AP) George F. Rand, 50, who at the age of 34 became president of the Marine Trust Company, and three years later organized the vast Marine Midland Corporation, died today.

The corporation, of which he was president, conducts a banking business through 90 offices serving 38 communities in New York and has resources of $600,000,000.

In 1921, Rand and a group of other young businessmen acquired an interest in the Buffalo Trust Company. Rand was elected president, and under his administration the firm's resources mounted from $15,000,000 to nearly $70,000,000 in 1925.

On January 1, 1926, the Buffalo Trust Company merged with the Marine Trust and Rand became president. Four years later, the Marine had grown into an institution with resources of more than $200,000,000.

The old saying, "there's something about a soldier," certainly holds true with the female of the species as well as their masculine brothers. They left Fort Des Moines, Iowa, Tuesday night, and after 40-odd hours on the train, they faced the last lap of their journey to the new WAAC training center at Daytona Beach, Fla., with every tie neatly in place and not a hat askew.

Have Layover Here.
Lieutenant C. Abbott, who with two other officers was in charge of the entire group, explained that this bunch had finished their training at Des Moines, and probably would be given ratings as soon as they reached their new stations where they would be mingled with the raw recruits to help with basic instruction.

But of course, since they had an hour to kill in Atlanta, they were swarming into the USO, stocking up on fruit and candy, and sending the usual picture post cards to the folks back home.

"Say," asked one attractive red head, "isn't Atlanta the place where the Henry Grady hotel is? I was there several years ago and sang in the floorshow as Ann Whitney—this is a grand town." Ann Whitney is now Ann Marcus. She married before joining up.

Ex-Torch Singer.
With the help of this ex-torch singer, the company's pride and joy—their own "Sergeant York," was found.

Jennie York, who's a cousin of the famous Sergeant Alvin York, turned out to be a tall, soft-spoken Tennessee girl, who explained modestly that she really wasn't a sergeant yet, but was an acting sergeant, and hoped to win her stripes soon.

"The first week you're out there, you think you'll die," laughed one WAAC, when someone asked how she liked being in the Army. "But after you get used to that biting Iowa wind and getting up at the crack of dawn, it's wonderful." Another curious bystander (a female one), asked about the brown underwear that is part of the WAAC G-I equipment, and she obligingly stepped into the ladies room and displayed a demure brown rayon slip.

No Hair Pulling.
All said their folks were enthusiastic about having WAACS in the family. The only dissenter to the statement was a petit brunette who explained: "My whole family thinks I'm a rebel, since I have two brothers in the Navy, a sister who's a WAVE, and a Marine fiancé."

One would think that with so many women thrown together in close quarters on a train for two days, there'd be hair pulling and caty remarks no end. That's so. "We've had a swell time, playing bridge, talking, writing letters," they said. "The only tough part is all of us trying to get to the mirrors at the same time at night—to roll up our hair."

But despite their uniforms and military bearing, the WAACS are still feminine to the core. They weren't at all above having soft drinks and conversation with the soldiers and sailors in the USO, and one asked confidentially: "We can't go out in the main part of the station—would you do me a favor and get me a bar of sweet smelling soap?"

SINGER TURNED SOLDIER—Passing through Atlanta was something in the way of a home-coming for WAAC Ann Whitney Marcus. She was here three years ago—as a singer in a floor show at the Henry Grady hotel.

USO MILITARY MANEUVERS—Claire Beecher, one of the 65 WAACS who passed through Atlanta yesterday, might well be one of the pretty girls advertised in the USO sign above her head. The admiring sergeant who was sharing the pleasures of the Terminal's USO with her preferred to remain the "unknown soldier."

when fed bits of eggs taken from plates of the diners.

Since eggs similarly packed and distributed by the government, perhaps even some from the same general consignment, were known to have reached other institutions here and in Washington state, federal authorities quickly ordered experts from the food and drug administration into the investigation.

Dr. J. C. Evans, hospital superintendent, said the eggs were served to working patients in the five wards. Some grew ill immediately. Their extremities became paralyzed, and there was some evidence of respiratory paralysis.

Within an hour the first victim succumbed; by midnight 32 had perished. Six physicians who worked with the victims all night said they thought most of those still ill would recover.

Doctor Evans questioned 30 members of the hospital's kitchen

Canned Eggs Use In Atlanta Schools Is Ordered Stopped

The use of canned eggs in 16 Atlanta schools which have public lunch programs was stopped abruptly yesterday after a warning by the Agricultural Marketing Administration that 47 deaths in the Oregon state mental hospital might have been caused by the canned egg yolks.

Marine Orders Paper Mailed To Solomons

Day-to-day existence on Guadalcanal may seem pretty precarious to the folks back home, but a Georgia Marine feels sufficiently settled there to order his morning newspaper for the next 10 months.

Lieutenant O. H. Palmer Jr., formerly attached to Candler Warehouse here, sent The Constitution two $5 bills with an order for a subscription to the paper "for whatever period of time this amount will cover."

"Since I left Atlanta and the States I'd have gladly given 10¢ for an Atlanta paper, so please give this your urgent consideration and get them on the way," Lieutenant Palmer wrote. "News, no matter how old, is interesting here on Guadalcanal."

Lieutenant Palmer's home is in Blythe, Ga., but during his station in Atlanta he lived at 1253 Avon street, S. W.

Hartsfield To Deliver Address to Newman Club

Mayor Hartsfield today will turn good will ambassador, and will deliver an address to the Newman Rotary Club at 1 o'clock this afternoon at Newman.

"I'm going to speak on good will and tell them what a good neighbor Atlanta is," Hartsfield said in accepting the invitation.

"Every bit of food prepared with canned eggs has been destroyed and the eggs distributed to the schools have been recalled," said Mrs. Berma J. Abercrombie, supervisor of the Atlanta public school cafeterias.

"Several of the city schools were prepared to serve rolls and cookies and gingerbread yesterday that had been made with frozen eggs," Mrs. Abercrombie declared. "But we are taking no chances. The food was destroyed and the eggs were sent back to storage plants."

Supplies on Hand.
Nine white schools and seven Negro schools use surplus marketing commodities, she continued, adding: "We definitely will serve no foods containing the eggs until after the supplies on hand have been analyzed and cleared by the government."

Colonel James F. Palmer, regional AMA administrator, said less than 30,000 pounds of canned egg yolks are now in cold storage in Georgia, most of them in Atlanta. He added no other state served by the regional office had canned eggs in storage.

However, Colonel Palmer ordered the distribution of canned eggs stopped completely over the southeast until a thorough investigation can be made of the Oregon tragedy. Physicians at the Oregon hospital expressed opinions that canned eggs, obtained from the marketing administration, contained poison or were toxic because of a chemical reaction.

Within 15 minutes after inmates at the Oregon institution had scrambled eggs for dinner Wednesday night they began to complain of violent cramps, the Associated Press reported. The first death occurred within an hour, five died within 10 hours and by midnight the toll had reached 32. By 4 a. m., 44 were dead.

In Washington, Dr. P. B. Dunbar, assistant chief of the Federal Food and Drug Administration, said food inspectors and chemists from his agency would be sent to co-operate with Oregon authorities in investigating the food poisoning.

The eggs on cold storage here, Palmer said, were intended primarily for distribution through the school lunch program.

First Report.
"All state officials responsible for the storage and distribution of this commodity have been instructed to cease the use of canned eggs until further notice," he declared. "If necessary, any supplies that may be on hand in Georgia schools will be carefully analyzed before they are used."

This is the first report of any ill effects resulting from the use of canned eggs, Colonel Palmer said. He expressed an opinion that if the eggs did cause the Oregon deaths, the contamination resulted from some mishandling after they had been opened instead of spoiling in storage.

The AMA was formed in January by Presidential order to combine functions of the Surplus Commodities Corporation and several other agencies.

thought it best to take this action pending determination of whether frozen eggs distributed by it had caused the deaths in the west coast institution.

This official said that a preliminary investigation had disclosed that 200 30-pound cans of frozen eggs had been turned over to the hospital last February and that 140 of them had been used prior to yesterday without reports of ill effect.

The AMA makes food available to relief clients and institutions through state and local welfare agencies.

LOOKING FOR MEN—Lieutenant Commander R. A. Sterzik, a Navy engineer specializing in the construction of airports, yards, harbors and docks, is here at the Healey building to interview civil engineer officer candidates "who want action without a long period of training."

Naval Officer Searching for Civil Engineers

Lieutenant Commander Here Interviewing Candidates.

Lieutenant Commander R. A. Sterzik, U. S. N. R., has reported to the Sixth Naval District headquarters in the Healey building to interview civil engineer officer candidates.

Commander Sterzik for the last 10 years has been with the Navy corps of engineers on airport construction and yard, harbor and dock work and for the last two years has been Navy superintendent of construction at Bayonne, N. J. He is a native of Edinburg, Ill., and a graduate of the University of Illinois.

"In the corps of engineers we are looking for officers who want action without a long period of training," Commander Sterzik said. "Qualified engineers, engineers with actual on-the-job experience, will be in command of battalions within five weeks after being sworn in."

"Officers at first given two weeks' Navy indoctrination at Camp Allen at Norfolk," he continued. "Then they receive three weeks' training in small arms, combat tactics, the use of landing barges, construction of gun emplacements and the like at Camp Bradford, also near Norfolk."

Captain M. C. Robertson, district director of procurement, said the Navy felt that because of the large amount of government construction in this part of the country in the last few years there were a number of men with the necessary experience who could qualify and thus contribute to the country's war effort valuable experience gained in the field.

Commander J. S. Leister, who has had much experience in laying ground work for the Navy's construction corps, also was in the city. He recently addressed the Atlanta section of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Latest Action Off Solomons Costly to Japs

battleships built or building with which Japan started the war, three, including the Haruna, which the Army reported sunk by air attack in the Philippines early in the war, are now on the ocean bottom.

Another measure of the terrific defeat the enemy suffered in the Solomons is the estimate by naval officials that at least 20,000 men possibly as many as 40,000 men with much equipment were lost. Naval experts here expressed belief today that it would take at least three weeks, possibly much longer, for the Japanese to gather another huge force for a new try at reconquering Guadalcanal and its strategic airfield.

The latest report on what Secretary Knox called "Round 2" of the Solomons campaign makes it possible now to piece together a fairly comprehensive account of the most complex and prolonged sea-air battle ever fought.

Danger Signals—Early this month, aerial reconnaissance showed the Japs furiously gathering ships and men at their northwest Solomons bases. They were repeatedly bombed by U. S. aircraft of the MacArthur and Halsey commands. By November 10, the huge force was getting under way.

First Blood for U. S.—November 12 at dawn American naval forces bombarded Japanese positions on Guadalcanal for 10 hours. The force struck back with 31 planes and American fighters and ships shot down 20 of them.

Attack Imminent—Meanwhile, the enemy armada of transports, cargo ships and a warship force organized around two battleships, plowed blue water for Guadalcanal. In the offing stood more Jap warships, waiting for the opportune time to strike.

First Thrust Repulsed—On Friday, November 13, shortly after midnight, American task forces which had been lying in wait, tore into the heart of the formidable enemy flotilla. The Japs were approaching in three columns and the outnumbered American ships dashed in among the columns, guns blazing, torpedoes hurtling at the foe. Much of the fighting was at pointblank range. As the American ships passed, the confused Jap columns fired on each other. Next day, U. S. planes finished off crippled Jap ships.

Second Thrust Partly Successful—On Friday afternoon, another strong Jap force headed for Guadalcanal. The warships arrived after midnight Saturday morning and bombarded American positions without opposition from our forces. This was followed by the appearance of an escorted force of 12 transports after daylight. Our aircraft sank at least eight of them, but the other four went on to the island.

Third Thrust Smashed—On Saturday night the Japs made still another attempt to attack Guadalcanal. This developed into the battleship engagement, results of which were reported in today's communique. How this action was fought still remains to be told here. Speculation was that it may have been a typical battleship fight, with the heavyweights of both navies slugging at each other over distances of 25 miles or more.

while lighter forces of cruisers and destroyers mixed at closer ranges. In the absence of other information, it is possible, of course, that the American force caught the Japs off guard and smashed them before they had time to get their ranges for effective return fire.

The Jap Runs Home—On November 15, Sunday morning, four cargo transports, presumably those remaining from the 12-ship force of November 14, were discovered beached on the Japanese sector of Guadalcanal and destroyed by gunfire and aerial bombs. Meanwhile, aerial reconnaissance showed the remnants of Japanese forces in full flight to the north.

Since their retreat, a Navy spokesman said, no reports have been received of any consequential action over, around or on Guadalcanal. The Japs apparently have not tried any land attacks nor have they even continued their regular mid-day air raids with which, until last weekend, they harassed the American defenders of the island and tried to wreck the airfield.

The Navy emphasized in issuing today's communique that information on the second battle was fragmentary and that it might be several days before full reports were in and the actions carefully plotted so a full evaluation of the devastation wrought on the foe could be made.

The fact that American battleships took part in the action was stated in the Navy's communique, which said that the task force was under command of Rear Admiral W. A. Lee Jr., of Owen Sound, Ky.

Lee's force "engaged a Japanese surface force in the Guadalcanal area during the night of November 14-15 and inflicted the following damage on the enemy," the communique said, listing the ships sunk as one battleship (or heavy cruiser), three large cruisers and one destroyer; damaged, one battleship, one cruiser and one destroyer.

The fact that the reports on which this announcement was based were at best fragmentary raised the possibility that even with this heavy score the full loss caused the Japanese might not even now be known here.

In commenting on the possibility of some duplication between today's report and that of last Monday, the Navy said in its communique that "clarification on this point must await the receipt of a complete summary of the action from the commander of naval forces in that area."

The area commander is Vice Admiral Halsey.

The communique made no reference to the progress of land activities on Guadalcanal and the Navy spokesman said there had been no reports of land activity of any consequence. Moreover, he added, the daily bombing attacks with which the Japanese had harassed the American troops on Guadalcanal apparently have ceased for the time.

American losses announced in the series of Solomons fights of last week now stand at two light cruisers and six destroyers sunk. Those were the losses reported in last Monday's communique.

smashing troop concentrations on the Don front, on the Volkov front south of Leningrad and even in the Arctic Rybachi peninsula opposite Finland.

(The Germans said that shock troops were fighting in Stalingrad and that Russian groups in the Tuapse area were cut off and annihilated.)

The Germans for several days now have undertaken no major drive in any sector although they have tried short, sharp punches at Stalingrad and in the Caucasus to improve their positions.

The impression here is that the death-dealing defense of Stalingrad and the Caucasus have inflicted such heavy casualties that the Germans were forced to slow down. Then too there is the urgent problem of preparing winter defense lines.

ATLANTA, GA., NOVEMBER 20, 1942.

Jap Shipping Resources

The war in the Pacific is primarily a war of naval attrition. Japanese strength is built almost entirely upon her navy, despite the large armies she has put in China and elsewhere. It must be remembered Japan proper is an island empire and such an empire must depend, for communications, lines of supply and transport, upon its navy.

In a war of attrition the United States is a certain winner. She has more naval strength in the Pacific than is generally realized and the victories at Midway, the Coral Sea and the Solomons have whittled down the Japanese fleet in considerable degree.

Furthermore it is highly probable the Japanese will make further attempts to recapture the Solomons control. If they do, our fleets will be waiting and ready for them. Each naval clash reduces still further the Jap naval power. Our losses have been smaller than theirs, but even though they were equal we can stand loss far better than they. Our present strength is, over all, greater and our replacement ability is overwhelmingly superior.

As to Japanese tonnage in their merchant fleet, which they must depend upon to transport their troops to the many distant areas they have seized and for any further aggressive action, as well as to supply their already widely scattered armies, they began the war with about 4,000,000 tons suitable for long distance transport. Much of this was either lost or badly damaged in the early stages of the war, in their attacks on Malaya, Burma, the Dutch East Indies, the Philippines, Wake Island, etc. Partially offsetting these losses are about 200,000 tons of shipping taken over from the Vichy French and another 200,000 tons of Allied shipping captured. They may, too, have been able to salvage some of the shipping sunk in ports they captured.

However, the extensive damage done of their naval vessels, even those which were not sunk, must have taxed to the utmost their shipyard facilities for repairs. Hence the amount of new construction they have completed since the war began cannot be very large. Nor are their resources of raw material great.

Shipping is essential to Japan, not only to transport men and supplies to the battlefronts, but also to bring in raw materials from the lands they occupy.

It is safe to assume, on latest estimates and most dependable information, that the shipping problem for the Japanese is very serious. And, as the war goes on, as our Navy and air force continues the war of naval attrition, that situation will only grow worse.

The day will eventually come when, stripped of naval power, Japan will be ready to fall, a ripe plum, before us. Then, be sure, Pearl Harbor will be fully avenged.

Forehanded Realism

While the use which the Allied Nations have made, and are making, of Darlan in North Africa has undoubtedly caused some shock and perturbation among idealists, there can be no question but that the policy thus far pursued has been of tremendous advantage to our forces.

Darlan is a victim of two emotions. One is his overweening ambition and the other his jealous hatred of the British. As a French naval officer he has always been jealous of British naval supremacy and he has allowed that factor to taint his entire character and outlook. Add to this his compelling ambition for personal power and the man's character begins to be understandable.

However, we have used Darlan to our advantage, in that his temporary heading of the African French has undoubtedly saved many American and British lives as well as invaluable time in the campaign.

Tolerance of Darlan did not sit well with the DeGaulle Fighting French. But it must be remembered that more French, in Africa, have been won over to fight on our side than could have been won if we had ignored or snubbed Darlan.

Darlan, it must be remembered, is an acknowledged Vichyite. He can call many from the ranks of Vichy Frenchmen to our side. Neither the DeGaulle faction nor the Giraud followers will lay down their arms just because they are joined by fighting men who were formerly under the thumb of the Hitler-controlled Vichy government.

As for Petain and his faction, they have no arms, either to fight with or to lay down. And, after all, when fighting a war it is not the politics of idealism we must follow, it is the hard realism of effectiveness in battle.

—TOSS A BOMB ON ROMMEL—

Tell Us Why!

People of Georgia cannot understand why they should be called upon to make greater sacrifices through the gasoline rationing program, than the people of other states.

People of Georgia are perfectly willing, nay, proud, to sacrifice and work to the utmost for victory in the war. There is no grumbling, no complaint on any denial of convenience, comfort, even of necessity, if they are told, plainly and reasonably, the reason.

Federal authorities in charge of the gasoline rationing program have aroused more criticism and antagonism than any others concerned in the war effort. The reason for this is plain. It is simply because they have not taken the general public into their confidence, have not shown why some states should be rationed and others not.

At first it was stated that the 17 eastern states, including Georgia, were rationed because of difficulties in transporting gasoline, caused by the submarine sinkings of tankers along the Atlantic coast.

However, Georgians know their state is fed by gasoline pipe lines and they know also there is so much gasoline in this state that some of it is shipped out, by trucks, to Alabama, a non-rationed state. They have read, also, reports that storage facilities are so strained it has been necessary, in some places, to pump gasoline back into the ground.

More recently they have been told gasoline rationing is not because of any shortage of the motor fuel, but in order to reduce motor driving and thus conserve rubber. Georgians agree this is reasonable, and they are willing to curtail their driving to the irreducible minimum in order to save rubber for the Army, the Navy, the air forces and other fighting services.

They ask, however, why should this method of rubber conservation be applied only to the 17 eastern states, including their own, and not to the entire nation? They cannot understand why rubber saved in any state is not equally valuable to the war program as rubber saved in their own commonwealth.

Now, with national gasoline rationing planned to go into effect all over the nation on December 1, Georgians are told they will be limited to three gallons per week, while the majority of the states will be rationed on a basis of four gallons per week.

Again, the question is asked, "Why the discrimination?"

Georgians are perfectly willing to make any sacrifice for victory, provided there is equality of sacrifice all over the country.

But the gasoline rationing mess reveals rank discrimination in favor of some states over others, it reveals an utterly undemocratic handling of the problem. It reveals, too, a condition and a trend of thought among some of those charged with official direction of the nation at war which is extremely dangerous, inasmuch as it creates dissatisfaction and encourages distrust of the national leadership.

If every motorist in the nation is limited to three gallons per week, Georgians will do likewise and grin in the doing. But Georgians unfairly discriminated against will demand to know the reason why so loudly and so persistently that investigation of the gasoline division of the OPA will be unavoidable.

Georgia Editors Say:

LET THE POLL TAX GO.

(From The Moultrie Observer.)

We wish that our senators in Washington would give up the fight to preserve the poll tax in a few southern states as a means of regulating voting. It is not at all to our credit. In these days when we are discussing various freedoms and fighting for liberty and representative government, it places the south in a rather embarrassing situation to be holding on to an old custom of the requirement of the payment of taxes or anything else as a condition precedent to voting.

As a matter of fact, the poll tax in Georgia, and probably in the other southern states, is a revenue measure. This is embarrassing itself, for a state to be impelled to levy a poll tax to get the money to run the government. It has the advantage of being a tax on the poor man. A lot of effort is being put forth now to find ways and means by which the poor people and the common people can be made to defray the expenses of government. Another thing that makes the poll tax in Georgia a sacred cow is the fact that the revenue emanating from this source goes into the school fund. We are all for schools and we never have enough money for schools and we haven't the heart to repeal a law that provides a little revenue for schools.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

SPAIN AND TURKEY WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Now that British-American forces seem to be in a fair way of chasing the Axis out of Africa, one of the questions uppermost in the minds of Allied military leaders concerns the future war position of the two last remaining important neutral nations in the European theater—Spain and Turkey.

Both have the possibility of influencing war events of the immediate future in a tremendous degree. The first, Spain, is a satellite of the Axis nations. Its present government head, Generalissimo Francisco Franco, owes his office to the help rendered him during the recent civil war by Germany and Italy. Turkey, on the other hand, has been friendly to the Allied cause from the beginning.

Still recovering from the exhaustion she suffered during the civil war, Spain is unable to make any marked contribution to the Axis war effort, even if she were disposed to do so. But what the Allied leaders fear is that Franco may be forced to collaborate with the Axis to the extent of allowing the Germans to pass through his country for the purpose of making a back-door attack on the British fortifications at Gibraltar.

If an attack of that kind were undertaken and succeeded, it would largely nullify the important victory we have won in North Africa. The Germans would not have to actually take Gibraltar. By planting a sufficient force just back of the fortress on the Spanish mainland they could make it extremely difficult for the Allies to send ships into the Mediterranean through the nine-mile-wide waters of the straits.

NOT ENTIRELY CLOSED Domination of the straits by German gunboats would not entirely prevent the entry of British and American ships into the Mediterranean. Discussing the point with government leaders on his last visit to Washington, Prime Minister Churchill said the British would still be able to get past Gibraltar with shipping by negotiating the narrow waters at night. But each convoy would be certain to suffer considerable losses.

Hence Nazi movements in the Spanish area are being closely watched by Allied sources. So far there has been no indication that Hitler is planning a move of the kind, although he is known to have rushed forces to the French side of the Pyrenees coincident with last week's occupation of France. This, however, might have been merely a precautionary measure taken in his general hysteria against the possibility that we might lay down an invading army in Spain. He is reported to have done the same thing at the Brenner Pass, which links Germany and Italy through the Alps.

NEW "SECOND FRONT" If Hitler should make a move in the direction of Gibraltar through Spain this might result in the Spanish peninsula developing into a second European front. With the great forces we now have stationed in North Africa, it would be a comparatively easy matter for the Allies to put an invading army down in Spain, using Gibraltar as the stepping-off place.

None of this would have been very practical before the Americans took over French colonial territory just across from Gibraltar in Africa last week. Now we seem to have the drop on that situation. If we have the drop, the Axis probably realizes all of this too well, and may be restrained from picking a course which otherwise he might not hesitate to seize upon.

AS FOR TURKEY As for Turkey, the Ankara government is in a position to play a far more important part in the war than the neutral country touching the Mediterranean. She has a well-trained army variously estimated at from one to two million men. But for the existence of this great force, Hitler long since probably would have overrun the country as his nearest pathway to Suez. He has been held back only because he realized the Turks would fight and he was not sure whether the cost would be worth the gain.

British and American successes in North Africa are thought by competent observers to have put an entirely different complexion on the Turkish situation. Heretofore, the Turks, while friendly to the Allies, were not free to make a gesture of support for fear of a frontal attack from the Nazis, who had a great army massed within striking distance.

PRESSURE EASED That pressure, to a large extent, has now been removed. The Germans may still move against Turkey in a gamble to offset what we have accomplished in North Africa, but military authorities think the possibility will grow more remote as we strengthen our foothold on the Dark Continent.

There is a greater possibility that Turkey may yet be brought into the war on the side of the Allies. If that should materialize, we would be provided with the easiest means of all for opening a second front in southeastern Europe. It would be a simple task to sweep across the Dardanelles into Bulgaria and Rumania, thence on against Germany's unfortified back door in central Europe.

Automatically a move of that kind would draw the Germans out of the Ukraine, permitting a juncture of our forces with the Russians.

ONLY LACK EQUIPMENT As presently constituted the Turkish army is supposed to be one of the toughest fighting units in the world. Its only drawback is lack of modern equipment. But this is a shortcoming that could be easily remedied once they decided to cast their lot actively with the Allied side. It is only fair to assume that our governmental and military leaders will be exerting every pressure to this end from now on.

The war could be shortened tremendously by the active cooperation of the Turks.

Three Reasons To Buy War Bonds. There is no need to "sell" this column, or this newspaper for that matter, on the desirability of everyone buying just as many war bonds and war stamps as they possibly can. We know it, as numerous editorials and other forms of advocacy have demonstrated.

However, a letter came in this week from a gentleman urging editorial support of the new campaign by the United States Treasury to increase the bond purchases through the 10 percent pay roll plan. We are for it, entirely.

The writer of the letter advanced three reasons why he wanted everyone to increase their bond purchases. And they are good ones.

After pointing out that the faster these bonds are bought the quicker the war will be won and done with, he said he was anxious to see the return of the day when he could get in his car and go wherever he pleased and drive as far as he pleased. That was reason No. 1.

Secondly, he wanted to be able, once again, to drink from six to 10 cups of coffee a day.

And, thirdly, he felt that the price of liquor is too high, largely because of increased taxes due to the war.

Simple Mathematics. There is a very simple mathematical situation applying to this war bond situation. It is that the nation needs every penny of spare cash, and a lot that she can spare, from everyone of us for the prosecution of the war and to save the nation from the tragedy of currency inflation.

Which means that we must turn into the Treasury all we have, over and above actual need, either through the channel of taxes or that of war bond purchases.

Next year taxes are going to be awfully heavy. No man will have an easy time paying them. But, if after they are paid he has anything left over, he'd better put it into war bonds. If he doesn't, the chances are the government will simply come along and take it anyway, by further increasing the tax burden.

And it's a whole lot better to put your money into bonds, whereby you will come back with substantial interest added, in due course of time, than it is to kiss it good-bye, completely, when you hand it to the tax collector.

The Pay Roll Plan. It is the aim of the Treasury to slip out of the public pocket, by means of bond and stamp sales, at least 10 percent of the public income. This is the necessary income for the prosecution of the war and the control of currency.

The simplest and best way to do this is to induce every worker for wage or salary to ask his employer to have his employer deduct 10 percent each payday and invest it in war stamps. When stamps to the value of $18.75 have been thus accumulated, they will buy a $25, maturity value, war bond.

Lots of workers are already doing this. To be exact, 22,000,000 of them. But that is not enough. Everybody should do it.

Hence it is the objective of the Treasury Department, in a special campaign now running and which will continue to December 31, to raise that total of pay roll savers to 30,000,000.

At present writing, 8 percent of the national pay roll is going into the Treasury through the 22,000,000 participants in the plan. And the twin objective of that treasury drive is to raise this percentage to the desired 10 percent.

As for those whose incomes come neither from salaries or wages, those who earn their living either in business or professional life and those who live on the earnings of their investments, we must simply trust to them to invest at least 10 percent of their total incomes in the war bonds.

Most of them are.

In the case of those unfortunate who have no surplus, because of unexpected obligations or obligations incurred in the past, all they can do is get out of debt as quickly as they are able so

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Petrillo NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—You probably know that Thurman Arnold recently went into the United States district court in Chicago to demand that Jimmy Petrillo, the president of the musicians' union, lift his embargo on canned music as he dis-coursed horribly by the juke boxes of the nation and on the transcribed radio music, most of which is just as bad, and was knocked for a loop by Federal Judge Barnes, who said that under the laws and the supreme court's decisions Jimmy was within his rights.

Mr. Petrillo, who comes from the alleys of Chicago, probably was astonished to hear this for his action was very high-handed and he is not very well up on the law's long-winded himself. He runs his union by ear and his mind runs back to boyhood experiences in which he generally found himself behind the eight-ball. He formed an early impression that the law would be against him in any conceivable tangle.

Mr. Petrillo's first experience left him with a fear which lasted for several years that he was a fugitive from justice subject to arrest on sight and a long term in the Pontiac reformatory. When he was nine years old, his father, who was an Italian immigrant and an earnest sewer digger, applied to his alderman on the north side of Chicago for a job for his boy, Jimmy. The elder Petrillo was a member of the alderman's organization as, indeed, even a poor sewer digger had to be to obtain a job of humble toil with the city of Chicago.

The alderman got Jimmy a job as train-butcher on a local running out of Canal street long before the Union Station was built, and James reported early in the morning for his first run. They gave him a uniform cap that came down over his ears and face like a bucket and had to be wadded with paper to improve the fit, and he was very proud of his brass badge across the front, which made him an official, like the conductor. His store of goods was in the baggage car, locked in a little trunk, and he was given a wicker basket from which to peddle his peanuts, crackerjack, chocolate almonds and figs.

Waited James sat in the baggage car to the end of the run and all the way back to Chicago and his heart filled with discouragement as the hours went on and nobody came to buy. Neither the conductor nor the brakeman thought to tell him that he was supposed to fill his basket and hustle the train and, as he sat there, temptation got him down and he sailed into his store of peanuts, crackerjack, chocolate almonds and figs.

Arriving back in Chicago at night, he lugged his little trunk and the basket to the commissary of the company which owned the concession, and the boss unlocked the trunk, ran up a quick inventory and said to Jimmy: "All right, give me $1.85."

"What for, Jimmy?" cried. "I ain't got $1.85. I ain't got nothin'." At that he dawned on him that he was in debt $1.85 for his own high-living and, with fear driving, he darted past the checker, out the door and away through the alleys in the dark.

Hunted Next, James got a job in the shipping department of a wholesale clothing company, in which he was supposed to write the names of various cities, such as Rochester and Los Angeles, on the bills. He couldn't spell Rochester or Los Angeles but he could spell Chicago and another terrible moment befell when there was a discrepancy of thousands of dollars' worth of merchandise and he was suspected of a plot to steal the same with outside confederates.

Sensing that something was wrong, James whispered to another young man to throw his coat and cap out the window of the tenth-story loft, and he slipped down and into the alley. His coat and cap came down but the coat lit on some telephone wires and stayed there and the cap blew off onto a near-by roof and James became a hunted man again.

Recently, in a conference with some radio employers, one of them said to President Petrillo, "Now, Jimmy, don't get dogmatic about this," and Jimmy said, "What do you mean dogmatic? What is this dogmatic?"

"It means don't be pushing us around all the time," the man said. "That is what it means."

Mr. Petrillo insists that he is the least dogmatic union leader in the United States but his encounter with the word was timely for it came just before his trouble with Mr. Arnold.

"He got dogmatic with me, that is what he did," Mr. Petrillo maintained. "He tried to push me around and the law says you can't be dogmatic with unions, not now any more."

they can then join the rest of the nation in this war bond march to victory.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today. From the news columns of Tuesday, November 20, 1917:

"London, November 19.—Premier Lloyd George defended himself in the house of commons this afternoon against the first serious attack his administration has faced, and so far as the house is concerned his defense seemed highly successful."

And Fifty Years Ago. From the news columns of Sunday, November 20, 1892:

"The football game at Piedmont park yesterday afternoon was a whole carnival in itself. The Techs put up a splendid game, but the weight of the Vanderbilt and the superior training of their opponents were too much for them."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

POLL TAXES I am very hopeful that the southern senators, now opposing the poll tax bill, will be successful in their fight only because the motives behind the bill are probably the most sordid and hypocritical ever introduced into the senate chamber.

There is back of it that group of Negroes, of which Walter White is typical; a few radical Communists, and a number of sincere persons. Walter White long has been the worst sort of leader any fraction of the Negro people could have, because he is, in my opinion, vain, personally and politically ambitious, and very much an officious show-off. His contacts mostly are white contacts. When he does deign to drop in on the Negro leaders who work at being leaders out of a sincere desire to advance their race, he leaves them as hurriedly as he can, going back to New York to term them "Uncle Tom's Negroes" because they aren't political exhibitionists such as he.

The poll tax has no business in a democracy and ought to be removed, but only—in my opinion—if you find some literacy standard to replace it.

It was established, I guess, to prevent the Negro from voting. It prevents about twice as many men from voting as it does Negroes in Georgia, so the original purpose is lost.

I am, I guess, one of those old-fashioned persons who believes that democracy is endangered by ignorance, and I therefore do not believe the right to vote should be tossed as one would toss scraps to the dogs. It is the highest privilege of a citizen and ought to be so regarded. So, if you ask me if I am in favor of abolishing the poll tax I will say "no," if that is all you have to ask. If you ask me if I am in favor of abolishing the poll tax and substituting some other plan which will enable literate persons to vote, I will say "yes."

TO BE WORKED OUT I don't know what sort of plan I wish I did.

I do know that if the poll tax is abolished there will be substituted some hasty, ill-considered literacy test, which will be more abused than is the poll tax.

So, I get extremely sick of these bi-annual, before-election bills to abolish the poll tax. It comes in with the righteous blarney about democracy in office, but the hand is the hand of Esau. There isn't an ounce of democracy in the power promoting the bill.

I'd like to see the southern states, which have the poll tax, get rid of it by working out, intelligently, something to take its place so that the right to vote is not the most valuable privilege of citizenship, open to every illiterate lout who may be bought with a sort of booze or a dollar bill for each marked ballot.

It would not encourage me about democracy to have 200,000 or more ready-made corrupted votes added to the ballot box of the state.

So, I hope the southern senators will hang in there and fight. I know that the motives of some of them are not of the highest. I am under no illusions about that.

But I do know they are better motives than those of a gang of manipulators and professional rascals who are behind the bill.

About half the southern states do not have the poll tax, so it is ridiculous to assert it is a necessity. It just happens those states are in better position to do without it, and most of them have literacy tests. But the odd thing is that it has not helped their democracy a bit.

Nor has it increased the number of voters. North Carolina, and Kentucky, turn up with about as many odd characters in office as the states which have the poll tax.

Removing the poll tax in Georgia, for instance, would strengthen immeasurably the hands of the demagogues.

I will agree that the poll tax has no place, but I do insist there should be something in its place which is put there for the protection of democracy and not for revenue reasons or for undemocratic purposes.

So, I say again, I hope the senators will stay in there and fight. They ought to have the help of every decent Republican, fearless enough to fight that gang behind the bill.

FEDERAL CONTROL I think, too, that Senators George and Russell, of this state, are entirely correct in saying that if the bill passes there will be set up another bureau to "supervise" elections when there is a federal official to be elected.

That would be most understandable. I am no states' rights fanatic. Most of the stuff about states' rights is pure bunk.

But I do believe in local government. It is the basis of democracy.

We don't want any federal bureau running elections in any state. Only a vicious politician would have put such a bill before the senate, with such backing, at this time. No patriot would try, taking advantage of the war, and the absence of soldiers, to put over something which doesn't come in with honest hands.

Well, I had promised to say something about art week in our town. I hope you will go out to the High Museum and see what we have in Atlanta; interest yourself in the teaching and in the opportunities for art. It is most worth while.

The Age That Loves Adventure Is the Ideal Age For Soldiers

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Every state still cherishes a few grand old men who served in the Civil War. Since that war ended 77 years ago, all of the survivors must be 90 if they were as young as they were in 1865. Most of them are older, for few could have been so young in 1865. Yet government records show that 253 Union soldiers might have been. At the time of their enlistment, 228 were 13 and 25 were only 10—believe it or not. There is no record to show how these infants served.

The Confederate army, being in more desperate need of men, must have picked them at least as young. Certainly it had commissioned officers as young as 17.

The present emotional controversy about the justice and wisdom of drafting youths of 18 and 19 results in part from lack of familiarity with history. We resent innovations but are reconciled to things that are the custom.

The idea of drafting youths of 18 doesn't startle us when we know that over 300,000 boys of 18 and under that age fought in the Union army. In the Spanish-American War at least one regiment contained boys of 15 and 16—though all of them of necessity professed to be 21.

There can be no argument about the superior quality of young soldiers. They have proved it in many wars and are proving it in this one—especially in the air forces.

REPRESENTATION FOR EGYPT
CAIRO, Nov. 19.—(AP)—King Farouk I said in a throne speech on the opening of a new session of parliament today that Egypt, non-belligerent ally of the United Nations, had requested and received a promise of representation in any peace conferences to be held after the war.

CHINA RETAKES MOUCHI

Dudley Glass

Acquaintance who dropped in the other day asked me about a man I know pretty well who has a distinctly German name.

"I'm pretty suspicious about that guy," he said. "What do you know about him?"

"Not much," I was forced to admit. "Except that his great-grandfather—or maybe there should be another 'great'—was a Hessian, from Hesse, in Germany."

"That doesn't sound so good," responded my inquirer. "I was taught in school to hate the Hessians. They fought against us in the Revolution."

"Sure," said I. "And if you'll read any history beside the seventh grade textbooks you'll learn that the Hessians were sold and delivered by their reigning prince to King George III—to come over here and fight—whether they knew what they were fighting about or not."

"You'll also learn that a large number of these Hessian hirelings liked the looks of the country so much—along with an opportunity for real freedom—that they settled down and took up farms and reared families. In a country where no prince could sell them, wholesale, or retail, to any King or government."

"As for this man you're asking about, I happen to know that his grandfather fought in the War Between the States—on the Union side. I'll admit—because he lived in Pennsylvania. And he fought in the Spanish War—on our side. And his son is somewhere overseas, fighting. On our side."

"Well, he's got a German name," insisted my caller.

"Look around town, at the signs over our best business enterprises," I returned, "and you'll find a lot of them. Why don't you go out and start a really good witch hunt? Do it personally and you'll get your hat battered down over your ears."

Just One Egg

Uncle Jack Hilton reported recently in his Banks County Journal: "There was only one egg in town yesterday and Jim Hill was fortunate enough to get that for four cents."

What's the matter in Banks county? Are the hens on strike. Has there been a disagreement over working hours? Or shop conditions?

All the nation is engaged in an effort to speed up production for the duration but nobody asks a hen to lay more than one egg a day. That seems reasonable enough. But I remained out of the controversy over how much cotton a man could pick in a day because I had never picked cotton. For the same reason I decline to argue further about egg laying.

But it does seem strange that the hens of Homer and vicinity have no objection to such a low point, even though it is not the egg laying season.

Perhaps the answer is that the region is short on hens.

In years past, when traveling for pleasure was not a my guide, back-seat driver and house hold dictator would force me to drive miles off the main route in hopes she could find a farm house where she could buy eggs at a nickel below the city price. She rarely could. Nobody, it appeared, raised chickens. Naturally, no chickens, no eggs.

We never could understand why these rural folk refused to raise chickens. They could grow chickens, feed at slight cost and they could have fried chicken for Sunday dinner instead of fat back and sorghum. And eggs are always good for trade at a country store.

Sometimes the answer was: "The varmints get 'em. Weasels and opossums and hawks."

Be that as it may, it was exceedingly difficult to find an egg in rural Georgia. Though Tennessee ships them east by the train load.

Coffee Already Rationed for Fighting Man

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Coffee rationing already has come to the fighting man.

He's limited to 40 cups a month at the training camps and even the emergency ration kit he carries on the battlefields furnishes him only one cup for three meals. The quartermaster depot here, where more than half of the entire Army's ration kits are packed, is adding two other drinks for the day—chocolate and lemon juice.

The amount of coffee handled at the quartermaster depots is restricted information, but officers say the distribution is in much smaller quantities.

The quartermaster depot says Army butter rations also have been reduced sharply. Tea supplies are being stretched by longer brewing.

Coffee rationing, the quartermaster depot reports, doesn't seem to bother the fighting men. The use of lemon and chocolate is appealing to young soldiers who are not coffee drinkers.

Franco Refused Bases To Nazis, Turkey Hears

LONDON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—A Reuters dispatch from Ankara quoted diplomatic sources in the Turkish capital today as saying that Spanish Generalissimo Francisco Franco had refused to grant Germany naval and air bases.

Spain, wedged between the Allies in Gibraltar and across the narrow strait in Africa on one side and Germany along her northern frontier on the other, apparently is trying to remain strictly neutral.

Although the Franco government is friendly with the Axis, which helped it gain power in the civil war, Spain's partial mobilization, announced two days ago, has been interpreted in informed European quarters as an effort to avoid fighting.

Ratification of Treaties

By Both Houses Asked

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—An amendment to the constitution providing that treaties be ratified by majority vote of the house and senate, instead of two-thirds vote of the senate, was proposed today by Representative Priest, Democrat, Tennessee.

He introduced a joint resolution to that effect and declared in an interview: "We can never again afford, as we did in 1919, to withdraw from collaboration with the rest of the world."

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up at night. Frequent or sooty passages with burning and stinging sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging headache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

By LOUIE D. NEWTON

THE RETURNING SOLDIER

Dr. E. C. Lindeman, of Columbia University, in an address before the Colorado Conference of Social Welfare, held at Denver a few days ago, pointed out his firm belief that the generation of soldiers returning from World War Two will dominate our national policy of the world.

He went on to declare that they will demand a strict accounting at the hands of those who remained at home and fashioned the patterns of the democracy for which they (the soldiers) fought on the far-flung battlefronts of the world.

And I think Dr. Lindeman is correct. I believe the returning soldier should dominate our national policy. When one thinks for a moment of the millions of select men and women who are today hazarding their all for the American way of life, he can hardly object to these defenders of our way of life having something to do with the policies of tomorrow.

That is not to imply that these men and women will come home to overthrow the structure of our political and economic and social and cultural and religious economy. They will not. They would not be fighting as they are today if they did not believe in the principles and purposes which prompted our fathers and mothers to establish here in this new part of the world a government committed to the proposition that every man, woman and child has the right to pursue life, liberty and happiness.

But it is my clear judgment and my deep hope that the returning soldier will quickly and definitely challenge any person or any group of persons who may have been trifling with these cherished principles and with the methods by which they may be maintained in violation.

We have had some ominous trends in this country for the past several years which the returning soldier will, I hope, call on the

PEGAL CHALLENGES TRUTH OF COMER LETTER

Editor, Constitution: Someone has sent me a letter from your Vox Pop by David B. Comer. I am told that Comer is an instructor at Georgia Tech.

Comer's letter speaks of my "unwarranted, untruthful attacks on American labor." He speaks of my "current misstatements."

I suggest that such generalizations should be supported by chapter and verse. On my part, I challenge Comer, who I will assume purports to be a teacher of truth, to cite any untruthful attack or misstatement out of my copy, and I would call attention to the deliberate but subtle falsehoods on Crooks and Communist agents in the union movement, embracing at a liberal estimate only 10,000,000 out of more than 40,000,000 American workers, are attacks on labor.

This man knows as well as I do and as well as I assume you do, that these unions are not all of labor and do not represent labor as a whole and he knows that I carpet. There is, happily, increasing evidence of such challenge on the part of those who are still at home and who are beginning to awake to these trends. The pendulum was swinging all too far toward the left at the outbreak of the war. The young men and women who have gone into the armed services were not responsible for these trends, but they will accept their responsibility to deal with them when they get back unless those who remained at home have done the job. I am confident of that.

These returning soldiers will know, without anyone having to tell them, that they not only had to fight this war, but they have got to assume the economic burdens of this war, and they are not going to temporize with any bureaucrat that assumes to sell our country down the river for a mess of Marxian potage. I look for an era of straight-shooting Americans, willing to go back to work, uncompromising in their demand that "liberty shall not perish from the earth."

DUDLEY GLASS WARNED OF LITIGATION PERILS

Editor, Constitution: In his essay or friendship, Cicero said, among other things, that a friend would come to another's rescue even in his absence. Now, although I have never seen Dudley Glass, whose picture appears at the top of his daily column, I have long enjoyed his writings, regard him as a friend. And I hasten to help him, as a friend.

In his column of the 18th he says he has consulted his lawyer and given notice of suit against the editor of the Pearson Tribune for remarking that Mr. Glass' picture "... looks like ..." he's "... a chitlin' eater."

I remind Mr. Glass that once one lady came to me seeking to sue another female for stealing her husband. She insisted that I state in her petition for damages that the stealer of her husband had a face that resembled "... a starved and perished possum of the Chattahoochee river valley ..." This I did, under protest. Answering this allegation, the defendant said, "... defendant says that her facial countenance will speak for itself, same having been given her by the powers above. ..."

W. tried the case before a jury, which rendered a verdict for the plaintiff. Be ware, friend Dudley, I write as your friend; a true friend. Sincerely, I say that it is entirely possible, as readers of Mr. Glass' column might generally agree, that although he denies he likes chitlins, the jury could find for the defendant.

Gas REFRIGERATOR
If...

1. You do not now have a refrigerator.
2. Or if you dispose of the refrigerator you now have to a dealer or to another consumer.

The War Production Board has "unfrozen" gas refrigerators, subject to the conditions set forth above.

This means, if you are eligible under the new WPB ruling, that as long as our present supply lasts, you may now purchase a new 1942 model Servel Electrolux—the refrigerator that freezes silently with no moving parts. A tiny gas flame circulates the simple refrigerant, producing constant, steady cold at the same low operating cost year after year.

Under the ruling gas refrigerators may be purchased for personal use—or for the use of tenants.

See our stock of refrigerators now, if you are needing one. Later on we may not have the size best suited to your needs.

If you now own a gas refrigerator—or if you should buy one of the new 1942 models just released—here's what to do to insure the utmost in refrigeration efficiency and longest life. With reasonable care your gas refrigerator will serve you faithfully for many years.

1. Don't overcrowd your refrigerator.
2. Place the food on the shelves so that there is room for air to circulate around it.
3. Reset your temperature control to normal after quick freezing operations.
4. Defrost regularly. Excessive frost cuts down refrigeration—wastes fuel.
5. After defrosting clean interior with weak solution of baking soda. Wash shelves with soap and water.
6. Keep outside clean with damp cloth.
7. Keep rubber door gasket free of grease and oil.

All in the Game

Change of Pace Most folks who agree with a subject don't write letters to the editor. Only those who disagree and consider controversy the spice of life normally take time to dash off a tart missive to the department with which they wish to take issue.

We had a bit of a blaze upstairs, in the chute of the carrier which conveys copy to the composing room, yesterday, and Mr. Frank Elliott, foreman, blamed it on one of the letters we've been receiving from Fort Benning soldiers and members of the paratroop infantry. Those letters have to be handled with asbestos gloves, at that. They have something to do with football superiority—the south versus the midwest.

Anyway, as we started out to explain, only rarely do newspapers receive letters which are not complaining about something. That's why we feel a bit flattered by the sentiments expressed by Private Ross Kirby, Battery B, 13th Bat., Fort Eustis, Va. Private Kirby writes:

"Dear Mr. Troy: I received the Sunday edition of the paper today and in glancing through the sports section, I realized that The Atlanta Constitution has the best sports section of any daily paper I have ever read, and every day I read the sports sections of lots of northern papers. There isn't much comparison; you-all have it on the others."

"I live in Atlanta and, until drafted, sold sporting goods for Beck & Gregg Hardware Company. I have backed every move and suggestion in regard to our wildlife problems that you have carried in your paper. I hope that some day before long the good people of our state will see the light."

"I was listening to the Georgia-Alabama game and at the half I felt like you did when you expressed your faith in the boys' winning ability from Georgia. I am a Georgia man and it did my heart good to hear them (Blue network) roll over the Tide from Alabama."

"My hat is off to you for seeing that we have the best sporting department of any paper in the good old U. S. A. More power to you."

"Yours truly,
"PRIVATE ROSS KIRBY."

A Diagnosis So, you see, all letters aren't extremely critical. Another, from Dan L. Gibson, of Albany, Ga., is in the nature of a diagnosis of what ails Paul Williamson, the rating expert.

Here's Gibson's letter—

"Dear Sir: "Don't let the Williamson System get you down just because it eased Boston College in ahead of Georgia Tech, although admitting that Tech won the nation's most important victory last week in defeating Alabama, being the first team of the year to score through the Tide's line and the first to whitewash the Red Elephant."

"While I am not favored with the acquaintance of Paul Williamson, I am inclined to think he wants to do the right thing. Yet I can understand clearly the pressure that Sugar Bowl crowd down at New Orleans must be putting on him, and you can see how it is working; they have eased the headache-powder boys up to second place already, and mark this, will have them in first place by the end of the season. New Orleans wants B. C. and that Sugar Bowl crowd, with Chamber of Commerce enthusiasm, wants to build B. C. up to the stature of national champions so as to make their show appear good outside of New Orleans."

"So don't blame Paul too harshly. He has to live with those promoters. Just remember my prediction: The Williamson System will have the headache-powder boys on top when the season closes."

"Yours truly,
"DAN L. GIBSON,
"Albany, Ga."

Point of View To carry this thing through to a consistent conclusion, the letter of

Tech Will Seek To Break 'Lieb Jinx' Saturday

Jackets Never Have Beaten 'Gator Coach

Present Engineer Team Already Has Kayoed Three Hoodoos.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY. This Georgia Tech football team seems to be making a habit of shattering all its old jinxes this season. And it will have an opportunity to break another one against Florida here Saturday.

Up until games this year the Jackets never had (1) beaten Notre Dame on Cartier Field, (2) defeated the Navy and (3) beaten Duke in Durham. Now they have their fourth chance at Johnny Jinx—defeating a Tom Lieb-coached Florida team for the first time.

Tech has beaten the 'Gators plenty, but since Lieb took over the coaching reins the Jackets have lost two in a row—16-6 in Atlanta in 1940, and 14-7 last year in Gainesville. But from the looks of the way the first-stringers snapped through their first scrimmage of the week yesterday this Jinx, too, is going by the boards.

BACK TO WORK. After laying off for three days following their Alabama victory, the Tech regulars went back to work in the first scrimmage on Thursday since the season started. Both offense and defense were stressed by Coach Bobby Dodd as he prepared his boys to defend their undefeated and untied record this season.

The squad is in its best physical condition since the Notre Dame game and everybody will be ready to play against the 'Gators. Jack Helms is back and all set to help Pat McHugh, Rabbit Jordan and Jim Luck in the punting department. Injuries have hampered both McHugh and Luck in recent games and Jordan has shouldered most of the burden.

HELMS BACK. Tech, too, is glad to see Helms back in the game ready to send those booming kickoffs of his deep into the end zone. He also is good on extra-points and field goals.

Only a light workout is scheduled for the Jackets today. There have been three scrimmages this week, most of them involving reserves, and the boys need a little rest to be on edge for the charge of the 'Gators.

Florida is expected to make a determined bid to upset the Yellow Jackets but the odds are prohibitive against it. It's the 'Gators last contest of the year.

'Gators Continue Rough Work.

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Coach Tom Lieb squeezed in another session of rough work today before calling a halt in the Florida 'Gators' preparations for their closing game of the season with Georgia Tech in Atlanta Saturday.

The line butted heads in a tackling scrimmage which gave the regulars a chance to turn on the steam against Tech plays run by the reserves. The backs, meanwhile, were hard at the task of building up their pass defense. This also was set up opposite Tech formations.

The bright spot of the day was the fact that Bill Raborn, stellar guard, took part in the workout for the first time this week. Raborn has been nursing a bruised ankle since the Miami game.

The squad will train at 3 p. m. tomorrow, traveling via Jacksonville, and will arrive in Atlanta around 7:30 a. m. Saturday.

Today's practice opened with a few brisk passes and punts to limber the gridmen, but soon gave way to rougher work. In the backfield drills, one combination looked especially good and is sure to see plenty of action against the Engineers. Charlie Fields, who plays quarterback and is filling the signal calling position in this group since the injury of George Sutherland, has devoted all of his attention to his new berth and has shown marked improvement. His work against pass today was particularly outstanding. O'Neal Hill, Fondren Mitchell and Bill Corry round out the smooth running formation.

Card Outfielder Is Granted Divorce

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Enos Slaughter, star outfielder for the St. Louis Cardinals, and a 1942 Series hero, today was granted a divorce from his wife, Hughlo Slaughter, by Circuit Judge James E. McLaughlin. The baseball player charged desertion. It was indicated Slaughter would make an out-of-court cash settlement.

Slaughter enlisted as an Army aviation cadet last August and said today he is still waiting to be called to duty.

Roche and Zaharias Wrestle Luttrell and Cistoldi Tonight

These team wrestling matches can be either twice as good or twice as bad as the ordinary contest involving only two men. However, with a lineup such as will be displayed tonight, there is little doubt that fans will be treated to a wild evening of action and excitement.

Dorv Roche, supported by Babe Zaharias, a new partner, will attempt to beat those self-styled team wrestling champions, Cowboy Luttrell and Angelo Cistoldi, into the resin dust. Last week Roche lost his partner, Ralph Garibaldi, due to an injury and the Cowboy and the Greek did a very nasty job of finishing off Dorv after weakening him with a READY FOR GATORS—Pat McHugh, Georgia Tech wingback, is back in shape and ready to go against Florida Saturday afternoon at Grant field. He was slightly injured in the Alabama game last week. McHugh, a junior, is the fastest back on the squad. His unerring pass to Clint Castleberry set up the touchdown which beat the Tide, 7 to 0.

Richardson, Conn 'Wants' Louis When War Is Over

Hornets Put 5-Game Win Streak on Line at East Point.

By HENRY DAILEY. Little heard about but nevertheless one of the city's most spirited rivalries will provide the fireworks in Atlanta's only prep game tonight. Two of the smaller teams in the N. G. I. C., the Richardson Rams and the Hapeville Hornets, will lock horns in a wide open battle on Russell's field in East Point. The kickoff is set for 8 o'clock.

Past records don't mean a thing when these two scrapping outfits meet in their annual feud which has been going on since 1914. Both institutions were still junior high schools. A good example is last year's game which the Hornets, with one of their best teams, had to push over a fourth-period touchdown to lick the Rams, who won only one game all year, 20 to 14.

This battle finds the eleven evenly matched, however. Hapeville, after a slow start, is riding a five-game winning streak. They lost to Russell, Toccoa and Newnan in the season and have since defeated Canton, G. M. A. "B," Marietta, Fulton and R. E. Lee. Richardson has won over Fulton, R. E. Lee and Commercial. The Rams tied Newnan and have lost to Marietta, Decatur, Russell and West Fulton.

Coach Harlan Harris, serving his first year as coach at Richardson, has a high scoring pass combination in Grady Akins and J. C. Blackstone. This pair has accounted for most of the Rams' scores this season. Hard plunging Wayman Creel is one of the best high school fullbacks in the city.

Coach Roy Brewer's main weapon is Captain James Brooks, a guard, who started as a guard but was shifted to fullback last year, has returned to his old post and made the Hornets defense hard to penetrate. Forrest Gerard, veteran end, is another standout. Quarterback Johnny Linton is Hapeville's best back.

Tech High's "Gulliver-minded" Smithies left yesterday for Tallahassee, Fla., where they will battle a strong Leon High eleven tonight.

The Mysterious Mr. X, masked panther who has not lost a match here or anywhere else, will tackle Ben Morgan in the semi-final. Morgan has come to the front with a bang since he put the Golden Terror out of action for an indefinite period with his crushing back-breakers.

Chief Chewacki makes another appearance in the curtain raiser. This time the Gypsy Romeo will take on Ralph Garibaldi.

Billy Hopes Joe Is Willing Because 'I'd Just Love To Meet Him Again.'

By JERRY WEINSTEIN. NEW CUMBERLAND, Pa., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Corporal Billy Conn thinks the war will be over in plenty of time for him to take up his ring career again.

"I'm young and in great shape," Pittsburgh's 25-year-old contender for Joe Louis' heavyweight crown said today, "and I'll still be young when this war's over."

Handsome Billy hopes the Brown Bomber feels the same way because "I'd just love to meet him again."

Conn is teaching this Army Reception Center's boxing team how to do it the Johnny Ray way, and he's enthusiastic about his job. Said he: "I don't find teaching hard. I just tell them what my manager, Johnny Ray, told me. He's a great teacher."

Billy is unable to understand why a Louis-Conn title match couldn't be arranged if the USO or other service organizations benefited from all proceeds.

"I read in the papers where some sailor, marine, soldier or coast guardsman is in a bout," he said, "I don't see why they won't let us fight but I'm willing to wait until the war's over because we all know winning that fight is most important."

Should a match be arranged, Conn is confident he can get in top shape within a month.

"I haven't been working out much but this Army life keeps me in good enough condition so that it wouldn't take me long to get ready for Louis or anyone else."

The Army has ordered 16,200 pairs of boxing gloves from the Benlee outfit, and the Navy has ordered 3,000 pairs—which should give our side quite a punch.

42 Deer Killed In Georgia Hunt

DAHLONEGA, Ga., Nov. 19.—(AP)—The U. S. Forest Service announced today that 42 deer have been killed in the first three days of the annual rifle hunt in the Chattahoochee national forest—twice the number bagged during the entire two-week hunt last year.

Lee Roberts, 16, of Gainesville, Ga., shot a 150-pound, eight-point deer yesterday, his birthday.

Poor Bob Pastor Really Needs Job

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 19.—A typist copying Bob Pastor's application for a war job at the General Electric Company noted the retired heavyweight had attended college, was married and the father of two children.

"Here seems a deserving fellow who hasn't had a job in 12 years," she remarked to a superior. "I'm glad he landed here."

In the blank for previous occupations, Pastor had written only "Worked for James S. Stewart and Sons in New York in 1931"—neglecting such details as staying 10 rounds twice with Joe Louis.

Monk Gafford Stars in Aerial Drill at Auburn

Babe Gendusa May Start in Place of Clayton Against Georgia.

AUBURN, Ala., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Halfback Monk Gafford, who will carry the main burden of Auburn's offense against Georgia this weekend, today turned in an outstanding passing exhibition as the squad tuned up its aerial game.

The elusive ball-carrier, who has received mention for all-conference honors, shared attention in the drill, however, with Fullback Jim Reynolds, Right Half Charlie Finney and Quarterback Babe Gendusa. Gendusa, although a sophomore, may start against Georgia in place of Junior Aubrey Clayton.

Coach Jack Meagher had his mind on Sinkwich passes, also, for a considerable portion of today's workout was devoted to pass defense.

Maroons Forego Contact Work Again.

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Mississippi State's Maroons skipped contact work today for the second time this week to hear Coach Allyn McKeen discuss Mississippi's "T" plays which they will see for the first time Saturday.

Practice consisted of a forward passing drill against a dummy team and a half hour session in calisthenics. John Hughes, veteran end, who continues to hobble around from a month-old knee injury, was the only trace of an injury on the squad.

'Cats Polish Offense For Tennessee.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 19.—(AP)—The Kentucky Wildcats polished up their offense today, including two or three new plays they hope to use against Tennessee Saturday, and prepared to leave early tomorrow for Knoxville.

Coach Ab Kirwan said he would take a squad of 33 men. Clyde Johnson, injured tackle, will make the trip and might be able to play a little. Kirwan said, although "Big John" has been idle since the West Virginia game with an injured knee.

The 55-piece Kentucky band also will accompany the team to Knoxville, making its first trip of the season with the Wildcats.

Today's workout was the lightest in several days and the 'Cats

Southern Elevens Go Yankee-Doodle

All they have to wrestle with are such as Witkowski, Hudacek, Zabalski, Kovach, Zazula, Buffalino, Santarelli and Zwierzynski on the Pre-Flight roster. Then they'll look over the W. & M. team and discover a few like Korczowski, Forkovitch, Grembowitz and Szabo.

appeared hop full of upsetting the Volunteers in the final contest of the season.

So intensely were they concentrating on the work at hand that the eight senior Wildcats forgot to take a final tackle at the dummy on Stoll field, an old custom of Kentucky seniors when they leave the practice field for the last time.

Two Sophomores In Tide Backfield.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Nov. 19.—(AP)—The Alabama Crimson Tide engaged in a short offensive and defensive drill today as Coach Frank Thomas continued experimenting with his first-string backfield in an effort to add scoring punch.

A couple of sophomores, Left Halfback Johnny August and Quartermaster Jim McWhorter, were moved into the No. 1 backfield but Thomas gave no indication as to whether they would start against Vanderbilt at Birmingham Saturday. There was indication a plenty from the workout, however, that they would see considerable service.

Teaming with the two sophomores were Don Sales and Russ Craft, regular fullback and right halfback, respectively.

The varsity showed extremely well at stopping Vandy running plays and looked fairly good in halting passes.

Bowls Face Battle To Land Outstanding Teams

UPSETS OR NOT.

Those searching for the light in the deep fog of remaining football games are now reaching out for so-called upsets.

They have known so many sudden overthrows this season, where the hot favorite was badly beaten, they are now naturally looking to the few shocks that still remain, possibly entertaining the idea of a small wager at a good price.

There can, of course, be no upset when Michigan meets Ohio State and Wisconsin moves against Minnesota, unless someone is foolish enough to give good odds on the winner.

These four teams belong together when they meet at Columbus and Madison.

I have an idea that Michigan and Minnesota will be hard to handle on this Saturday date.

But I couldn't quarrel with those who like Ohio State and Wisconsin, playing at home.

I think Michigan has a slightly better chance than Minnesota has against Wisconsin, with such stars as Pat Harder, Elroy Hirsch and Schreiner on the Badger roster.

In looking to upsets you must find some shaggy underdog thrown against the top flight, the unbeaten.

Two Faint Possibilities.

There are still two faint possibilities left. And they are not shining lights.

They include an upcoming Auburn team against Georgia at Columbus, Ga., on Saturday and a possibly aroused Holy Cross team against Boston College's collection of mastodons and mammoths on November 28.

Auburn and Holy Cross don't happen to belong in the Georgia-Boston College segment.

But they are just about as big and just about as fast. I've seen Auburn teams, none too hot at the start, come like a prairie fire down the stretch. Auburn can be tough. Ask L. S. U. Ask Bob Neyland, late of Tennessee. The Colonel will tell you.

I've seen reeling Holy Cross teams suddenly turn on Boston College against big odds and raise what is technically known as "havoc." Don't forget it is the underdog that has the shining target.

When you have everything to gain and nothing to lose, you can have two aces in the hole (if no one is looking).

The Surest Shot.

The surest shot of the pack to remain unbeaten is Tulsa. Who of the Giants, has been scouting Tulsa. He rates Henry Frnka, the Tulsa coach, on a par with anybody.

Big Steve also thinks Tulsa would give Boston College, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Michigan or Ohio State all the headaches they cared to assume.

He also rates Glenn Dobbs, the Tulsa star, on a par with anybody in the country.

"I only know how badly I wanted him," Big Steve said. "And that goes for several others on that Tulsa team."

If there is anyone who knows more football, more national football, than Big Steve of the Giants, I haven't met him yet.

"What strong team has Tulsa played?"

To be frank, how many strong teams have most of the unbeaten met? Extremely few.

After all, Tulsa beat Oklahoma, 23 to 0, and Oklahoma tied Missouri, which fought Wisconsin to a standstill.

Tulsa crushed Baylor, 24 to 0, and Baylor beat the T. C. U. team that whipped Texas, Texas A. and M. and U. C. L. A.

Tulsa is the most underrated team in the country.

Georgia Tech has a gallop

Big Shortage Of Standouts In North Seen

Tech, Georgia, B. C. and Tulsa Only Available A-1 Elevens.

By WHITNEY MARTIN.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—(AP)—It looks like some of the Bowl committees, which usually are pretty well satisfied that they have lined up the cream of the crop for their games, will have to be satisfied with skimmed milk next January 1. There just isn't enough cream to go 'round this year. Priorities, you know.

Of the first ten teams in the Associated Press current weekly poll, four—Michigan, Ohio State, Wisconsin and Minnesota—are members of the Big Ten, which looks upon such post-season games with a jaundiced eye as something for exhibitionist schools with a vacuum in the treasury and quite beneath the dignity of a conference to which football is so incidental it can only play, year in and year out, just about the toughest game, for if they were the committees would find themselves in a pretty pickle.

A fifth, Notre Dame, has politely removed itself from consideration for a Bowl game, leaving the field, with one exception, confined to the south. The southern schools, fortunately, aren't allergic to Bowl games, for if they were the committees would find themselves in a pretty pickle.

CHANGE ADDRESS.

As it is, if the committees want to string along as closely as possible to the leading teams as rated by the nation's sports experts at large, some of them will have to temporarily change the address of some of the schools to north of the Mason-Dixon line unless they want to make their games practically neighborhood affairs.

Boston College is the only northern team which seems to meet the Bowl requirements both from the standpoint of class and availability. In fact, the Eagles aren't just available. They're inescapable, with all the artistic coyness of a gal trying to avoid attention through a subtle well-modulated shriek of "Yoo-hoo, here I am, over here."

Tulsa is in that no-man's land between the north, the south, the Midwest and the southwest, but actually is pretty well south and if you were picking a strictly northern representative for a Bowl game you wouldn't take Tulsa and expect to have the north go wild over it.

Georgia, Georgia Tech and Alabama are as south as Old Black Joe, and if you consider he eleventh team in the poll as a good Bowl candidate you have another southern entry—Tennessee.

TOUGH SPOT.

The far west is in a tough spot to pick its Rose Bowl representative. It is a matter which team is selected there are going to be lads sitting up in the stands New Year's Day clucking disdainfully: "Shucks, they ain't so hot; we licked the socks off 'em."

It may be that they are all too good to boot out there, and undoubtedly any one of several teams could go into the Rose Bowl and give stout opposition for any opponent, but their chronic habit of knocking each other off willy-nilly has left the impression there verified by the fact that the nearest one of the coast teams comes to being in the first ten is Washington State, ranked No. 12.

Right now it would seem that the Bowl that gets the game between Boston College and the winner of the Georgia-Georgia Tech game could claim it had skinned the cream. The game might turn out to be about as interesting as an old pair of shoes, while some other Bowl game between two well-shodded elevens might be a whiz but from the publicity angle a game between two potent undefeated teams has the bulge.

Anyway, it looks like the north might have to adopt some southern schools to represent it. Which shouldn't be hard, at that. Some of the addresses on the player rosters look like Ohio State League franchises.

Carl (Peanut) Dixon, former Morris Brown great, is coaching LaGrange, which boasts a powerful passing attack. Dixon has such outstanding luminaries as McClelland at end, Ellison at tackle, Griggs at guard, Jackson at fullback and Reid at quarter. The Grangers believe they can stop the Trojans and thereby keep intact their record of not losing a game since they organized.

"Bull" Shannon, of the Trojans, believes the LaGrange outfit is a tough team but intends to run rough shod over them as he has all corners. He has such players as Pierce, center; Little Shannon, a brother, at guard; "Dusty" Owens, at halfback; Wesley White, at halfback, and Trammell at end to back up his claims.

PIGSKIN PETE

Predicts:

TAKING over the Pigskin Pete role for The Sporting News this week, Jack Troy, sports editor of the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution and one of the South's best-known sports experts, predicts the results of the pro and important college games for the coming week-end.

Troy has served as sports editor of the Constitution for five years, having succeeded Ralph McGill, now editor of that paper. Jack has been writing football for 14 years. During that time, he has covered three Rose Bowl games, two Sugar Bowl games and one Orange Bowl contest, in addition to numerous inter-collegiate games from Miami to Boston. His authoritative and breezy comment has given him a wide following among sports devotees throughout the South.

When Frank Leahy went to Notre Dame as coach, the Constitution had an exclusive advance story on the move. Following Boston College's victory over Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl, more than two years ago, Troy's sports department obtained from "an unimpeachable source" the news that Leahy would take over the Irish's post at Notre Dame, and made the prediction. The story attracted national attention.

Here's the way they look to Troy in the college and pro games for the coming week-end:

Wright Fights Willie Pep for Feather Crown

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Willie Pep, a fast little fighter out of Connecticut who operates some what on the theory of a windmill in a gale, steps up in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night to try to answer the ringer's $64 question: "How long can ancient Chalky Wright keep going?"

Willie and the Chalk fight it out over the 15-round route for Chalky's world featherweight championship, which is not to be confused with the featherweight championship owned by Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson. Wright's title is recognized by the New York State Athletic Commission and Wilson has the National Boxing Association's blessing.

Pep has skyrocketed along so successfully in piling up his all-victorious string of 53 fights in a row that his outing against the aging Los Angeles Negro is going to turn out to be the high financial spot of this indoor nose-mashing season. Aided and abetted by some 8,000 or 10,000 Connecticut rooters who are coming along to see their hero in action, the turnout for this tussle may hit the 18,000 mark.

Pep—whose real name is Papaleo—punches so fast and so frequently once the referee tells the boys to "come out fighting" that he's been installed a 5-to-8 favorite to take the crown away from the Chalk. This is not to imply, however, that Wright is a doddering old man, although his age is one of Jacobs Beach's major mysteries.

JEA Basketbatters Start Play Sunday

The Jewish Educational Alliance Basketball League will open its annual tournament Sunday. The tournament will be conducted in two sections, one for seniors and one for juniors. The winners will be four teams in each division.

The tournament will be conducted on a split season basis with the winner of the first half playing the winner of the second half for the league championship. All games will be played on Sunday afternoons. The four teams in each division seem to be evenly matched. There is no outstanding favorite in either section.

All teams are now busily engaged in working out their plays, ironing out the kinks in offense and defense and generally preparing themselves for a long hard season of play.

The schedule for the opening day will be as follows:
3:30 o'clock—AZA 357 vs. AZA Independents.
4:30 o'clock—AZA 357 vs. JTC "B."
4:30 o'clock—AZA 134 vs. Lichtenstein.
6:30 o'clock—JTC vs. SOZ.
Dancing will follow the games.

Bulldogs Hold 1-Game Edge Over Auburn

Georgia Has Won 21, Tigers 20 and Five Have Been Tied.

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 19.—Georgia and Auburn have been playing football every year since the game was introduced to the deep south and during that 46-year history, only one game separates the two clubs in the number of victories scored.

It is unusual that over such a long span of seasons, that two clubs have such an even record. Georgia has scored 21 victories, Auburn 20 and five ended in scoreless ties.

So when the Bulldogs, currently ranking No. 1 in the nation, tangle with the underdog Tigers in Columbus Saturday, Coach Wallace Butts has but to draw out the record book to impress his charges with the ability of Coach Jack Meagher's rough-and-ready Tigers.

Georgia has the longest winning streak in the Auburn series, nine straight, from 1921 to 1931, but since Coach Meagher showed up at the Plains neither team has won more than two in a row.

TWO STRAIGHT.

The Bulldogs took the last two, so they have an opportunity this week of breaking a record for the series in recent years.

Coach Butts, as he went about preparing his charges for the battle, received the none too heartening news that two of his ace backs, Dick McPhee and "Red" Keuper, might not be able to go against Auburn.

Jim Todd, who also missed the Moccasin tilt, will be ready to play against Auburn, which is good news to Georgia folk. Todd, although ranking second to McPhee as a fullback all season, is the best quarterback on the squad and his signal calling was badly missed against the Moccasins.

Coach Butts will stick to his usual lineup for the game, with All-American Frankie Sinkwich probably operating at fullback and Charley Trippi at tailback again, just as they did against Noogo.

POSCNER AND DAVIS.

George Poschner and Van Davis will be the ends; Gene Ellenson and either Willard Boyd or Garland Williams, tackles; Walter Ruark and J. P. Miller, guards; Bill Godwin, center; Walter Maguire, quarterback; Lamar Davis, wingback; Sinkwich at fullback, and Trippi at tailback.

Can't Remember Making Only Tally

DALLAS, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Either fumbles or penalties had kept D. Allen, Southern Methodist's fancy ball carrier, away from the goal line.

Finally he made it. He received a hard head jolt in the Arkansas game, but still managed to take off a few seconds later for a 51-yard touchdown run.

Happy? Well, slightly. That jolt was more severe than anyone suspected. He can't remember scoring his only touchdown of the season.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR.

Les Coates, Salt Lake City Desert News: "The acquisition of a winning football team would seem to be only a matter of time. But nevertheless you can't cheer an ethic."

ALL IN THE GAME

Phil Barrett, Atlanta, is presented. It is self-explanatory, as follows:

"Dear Mr. Troy:
"I read your column with a great deal of interest this morning. I note your comment on Mr. Williamson ranking B. C. above Tech because of their rout of the Fordham Rams. Said Mr. W. says a team that can smash a club of the Rams' caliber deserves to be ranked ahead of Tech. If this is the case, why did he not rank the Tennessee Vols ahead of Tech? I was present in Knoxville that Saturday last month when a Vol team all but murdered a Fordham team, in fact, the same B. C. beat. Perhaps the Rams were stronger then because they had not suffered so many beatings. From newspaper accounts, Denny Meyers, the Eagle coach, did not use second-line players until the last quarter, as he wanted to pour it on the hapless Rams. It is interesting to know Tennessee hardly used a regular after the first half."

"I think Boston College has a great team. However, like yourself, I think they must prove their claim to greatness before they can be ranked over Georgia or Tech. The sweetness of victory depends upon how you get it. Therefore, that paper doll schedule of Boston College must taste pretty sour."

"By the way, contrary to most others, I think Tech, not Georgia, should be the country's No. 1 team, as their schedule is strictly A-1. "With best wishes, I am yours very truly."

"PHIL BARRETT."

Perhaps tomorrow or the next day we will continue with the soldier series. We are indeed happy, not only to present their views, but also to serve as a means for a little off-hours diversion. If it helps them let off steam, all the better.

Durocher To Lead Bums as Playing Manager; Dressen Released

Lippy Admits Gambling Hurt Club's Chance

Fitzsimmons Offered Montreal Team as Build-up to Brooklyn Post.

By JUDSON BAILEY.
NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Leo Durocher was given back his job as playing manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers today, but President Branch Rickey made it clear that the New Deal in Flatbush has begun.

In the same press conference at which Durocher's appointment for a fifth season was announced, it was disclosed that Coach Charles (Chuck) Dressen had been given his outright release, that another coach, Fred Fitzsimmons was being offered the Montreal farm-club managership as a possible first step toward the future leadership of the Dodgers, and that gambling for high stakes by the players would be banned.

Rickey would not disclose the terms given Durocher, but said that he had been signed for one year to a player's contract instead of a manager's. This means, besides the fact that Durocher must play ball this year, that he also can be released on 10 days' notice, both as manager and player.

DUROCHER SATISFIED.
Durocher's former contract was understood to have called for $23,500 plus bonus provisions. Rickey said his agreement for next year had no bonus clauses but refused to indicate how the salary compared with last year. He explained, however, that Durocher was perfectly satisfied and that terms never were at any time a serious cause for the delay in signing.

What was involved in the long conferences Rickey and Durocher have held this week and previously in St. Louis came out as other points in Brooklyn's program were revealed—club discipline and the release of Dressen, former manager of the Cincinnati Reds and Durocher's first assistant ever since he took charge of the Dodgers in 1939.

Rickey said that hereafter the Dodgers would have only two coaches instead of the three and four they have carried in recent years. He said both he and Durocher wanted John (Red) Corriden to remain coach of the Dodgers, but that they had agreed Dressen must go because "we have certain coaching plans in mind and this was the move we felt it necessary to make."

Durocher in Charge.
He hastened to explain, though, that the change in the coaching staff did not mean that he intended to force Durocher to accept a lieutenant who would be the leading candidate to succeed to the managership if Durocher, married but childless, were called to the Army during the 1943 season.

As a matter of fact, he added, "I feel it preferable to have coaches who do not have a yen to manage. If Leo were to go to the Army I would not have in mind that either of his coaches would be the man to be elevated to the managership. I don't say one of them might not be, but they would not be selected with that purpose in mind."

Then Rickey, who was vice president and general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals before moving to the helm of the Dodgers at the first of this month, explained his policy of selecting managers and the opportunity he was holding forth to Fitzsimmons, the veteran knuckleball pitcher who starred on the mound for both the Giants and Dodgers before retiring to the coaching lines last season.

Likes Fitzsimmons.
"I gave Montreal permission to deal with Fred," Rickey said, "I ordinarily like to get my managers out of my own organization. I have been doing it for years with great success. In all that I know about Fitzsimmons—his temperament, his record, his background, his character and his name—I believe he has the qualifications for a manager."

Asked what attitude Fitzsimmons had shown toward the farm-club position, Rickey said: "Fred has been very reluctant, indicating to me a disposition to stay in the big leagues. This is not unusual, but I am strong for him taking it and I am ready to make it much more attractive financially than coaching for us."

"Even if he turns it down the job will still be open for him. In fact, I am determined to keep the place open for him until I am sure he has decided definitely on something else."

Rickey then was asked if his attitude toward Fitzsimmons was as important as it appeared on the surface and replied:

"It can't be more important than I want it to look on the surface."

TOO MUCH GAMBLING.
Rickey said he did not want to discuss all the considerations that came up in his negotiations with Durocher, but a manager, who had sat through this much of the interview without a word, was asked about the many reports of gambling on the club and whether

Owls Are Guests At Grid Banquet

The West Fulton High grid squad, which closed a successful season last night against Spalding High at Griffin, will be honor guest at a football banquet to be held at the school tonight at 7 o'clock.

Lieutenant Bill Hartman, former Georgia player and backfield coach, will speak on the program.

Starting the season with a squad that numbered only five lettermen from last year's eleven, the Owls performed surprisingly well and finished the season with six victories and four losses.

pushed over three touchdowns against the Tennessee varsity within 15 minutes.

"It's nothing to jest about," Coach John Barnhill, of Tennessee, declared. "If Kentucky plays the type of football for which they're capable Saturday, it looks like we'll take it on the chin."

Barnhill said the freshmen passed over two touchdowns in rapid order against the first-string backfield consisting of Bobby Cifers, Jim Gaffney, Bill Nowling and Charles Mitchell.

Tennessee's second backfield shared little better against the freshmen, who scored a touchdown quickly over Clyde Fuson, William Hillman, Bill Meek and Walter Slater.

Kentucky has not been flat against a Tennessee team since 1938, Barnhill went on, "and I've a feeling the Wildcats will be wild Saturday afternoon."

Added to other Tennessee worries was the fact that Freshman Al Russas, varsity tackle, is awaiting a knee operation tomorrow.

Russas, Providence, R. I., youngster, was hurt in practice this week.

Two Vandy Regulars May Miss Tide Tilt.
NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Coach Red Sanders said today that two of Vanderbilt's starting eleven probably would not open against Alabama in Birmingham Saturday.

The Commodores' head man revealed that John Steber, guard, was still in bed with a cold and J. P. Moore, regular wingback, was running a fever.

If these two regulars are out, and Sanders shook his head at their chances, Jack Richards and Wingback Jimmy Webb, of Birmingham, will get the assignments.

With End Julian Olsen benched with a broken hand and Harry Richter slated to replace Sonny Baird on the other flank, the Commodores will open against the Tide without the services of a single man who faced the Tuscaloosa team here last year.

er as a result of his conferences this would be banned in the future.

Durocher said there had been entirely too much gambling among his players, he realized now, but that he did not think it had any effect on their play.

"I'd say we probably gambled as much in 1941 as 1942—though maybe the stakes weren't as high. I know I've been accused of winning money from my players, but they never had to pay me. And I paid a lot of bonuses, too. Why, when a pitcher won a good game for me I'd give him a bonus. Lots of times I've said 'Well, that's $200 less you owe me.'"

"I think we were gambling too much. It's a bad practice and it's one of the things I had in mind eliminating if I was retained as manager—even before I talked to Mr. Rickey."

SOME DIDN'T GAMBLE.
"I won't say it wasn't harmful, but we never had any ill feelings because of it. And there were a lot of players who didn't get into the games."

"Why, I can put my finger on half a dozen right now. Take Vaughan, Camilli, Medwick, Reiser, Walker and Wyatt—that's six right now. I've never turned a card or gambled five cents' worth."

Later he added Peeewe Reese to the list.

"I'll say this," he concluded, "there will be no gambling this year—for stakes higher than 15 cents."

Durocher was asked if other disciplinary measures would be imposed and answered in the affirmative, but before he could get further, Rickey interposed severely, "I wouldn't go into that" and then barked, "next question."

CAN PLAY HORSES.
This w's whether Durocher would permit his players to go to the race tracks and the manager falteringly said, "I don't think I care to answer that now."

Rickey, however, declared, "I know what my answer would be. We have no control over the players in their off time. What we are going to stop is this internal gambling. I don't call it gambling where diversion or fun is the object and where the prize is inconsequential."

"But internal gambling can be controlled by the club and it's far more important because it can have an effect on the game itself." Rickey also announced that the Dodgers definitely would train at West Palm Beach, Fla., and the Montreal club at near-by Lake Worth. He said the team would report about the first of March.

Spalding Trips W. Fulton Owls By 26-12 Count

Wolfpack Rallies With Three Touchdowns in Last Half.

GRIFFIN, Ga., Nov. 19.—Coach Kinsey Stewart's Spalding High Wolfpack defeated West Fulton by a 26-12 score here tonight by shoving across three touchdowns in the second half after the battling Owls held them on practically even terms in a hard-fought first half.

Spalding got off to a flying start when Bates scooted around end for 15 yards and a touchdown early in the second period. Bates added the extra point on a drive through the line. This score was set up when the Owls got off a poor punt to their own 45-yard line. The Wolfpack used only seven plays to reach pay dirt.

Coach Vic Hansard's boys almost evened the count a few minutes later by recovering a Spalding fumble on the Wolfpack 18. From there they turned Roy Hartsfield loose three times, the last for a seven-yard touchdown romp. The extra point was missed and the half ended with Spalding on top by 7 to 6.

The Wolfpack tallied twice in the third quarter. Once on an 85-yard drive climaxed by a short plunge by McGee and again on an 18-yard pass to Barfield.

The fourth and final Spalding touchdown was registered in the fourth period by Bates after the recovery of a fumbled West Fulton lateral on the visitors' 16.

West Fulton terminated the scoring a few plays later on a 50-yard pass from Dickey to Hartsfield.

Score by periods:

Spalding 0 7 13 6—26

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Should the Athens (Ga.) Naval Pre-Flight football team be selected to play in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas New Year's Day, two former Tennessee players would be in their fourth bowl game.

Bob Foxx, ace backfield performer, and Bob Suffridge, guard, who now perform for the Pre-Flighters, made several All-America elevens while at Tennessee. They played in the Orange Bowl at Miami in 1939, the Rose Bowl in 1940 and the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans last year.

Tomorrow is the Last Day to use your No. 2 Gasoline Ration Coupons —time to change your oil, too!

Midnight, tomorrow, your No. 2 Gasoline Ration Coupons expire.

While you're getting gasoline, ask your Shell Dealer to drain, flush, and refill your crankcase with Shell X-100 or Golden Shell Motor Oil.

You may have thought that with less driving you don't have to be so careful about changing your oil. Actually you have to be more careful. You can't take any chances, for two important reasons.

The finest motor oil is exposed to impurities, dust, abrasives, and other contaminants carried through the air. Even though your oil lies idle in the crankcase, partially burned fuel particles are constantly promoting oil deterioration. And, with today's short trips and lower driving speeds, your engine doesn't get hot enough to vaporize the water formed by combustion and condensation. This water accumulates in the crankcase and further contaminates your oil!

If your oil shows signs of impurities, let your Shell Dealer change it today—and every time you go to a new coupon number. That's every two months. Then you know you're on the safe side and probably won't have to add a drop between drains.

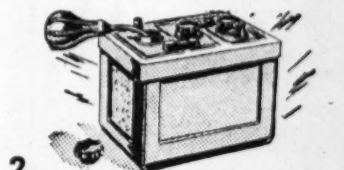

At the same time, get another essential wartime service—Shelllubrication. Thorough, correct lubrication every time you go to a new number is important in making your car last for the duration. It includes:

1 COMPLETE LUBRICATION of all moving parts with fresh Shell Lubricants. Inspection of transmission and differential lubricant levels.

4 SPARKPLUG CHECK—cleaning and adjusting if necessary. Dirty plugs can waste 10% of your gasoline.

2 BATTERY CHECK—Especially important as reduced driving may allow strength to fall below normal.

5 TIRE CHECK—the kind of regular tire inspection required by the Government.

3 RADIATOR CHECK—testing of solution, inspection of all cooling-system hose connections.

6 CLEANING of all windows and interior of car. Inspection of fan belt, lights, and other motor accessories.

Put your car in the hands of any Shell Dealer displaying Ground Crew Wings. His "Ground Crew" Service is an essential war service designed to help your car outlast the duration. Patterned after the rigid maintenance routine of the U. S. Army Air Forces, it treats your car like a plane!

RIDING THE CIRCUIT AT THE METHODIST CONFERENCE

BY THOS. M. ELLIOTT

The four prominent Methodist preachers who are retiring from the active ministry this week have served the church for a total of 204 years, and they have moved from one charge to another for a total of 77 times.

As Bill Arp would say, "I've been ruminating about" those 77 moves. Didn't they have fun? And what a freight bill! The last time I moved by freight train my bill was for the paltry little sum of 83 plunks. Think of all the farewell parties, and how many times they had their backs slapped. Some times they moved a short distance, and then again they moved several hundred miles. If an average of 100 miles per move is set up, you have in the neighborhood of 7,700 miles—and they didn't get 20 miles to the gallon, either.

Think how many times those preachers smashed their thumbs nailing boxes, and of how many times they tore their britches on nails sticking out. Then I want you to think how many times they had their Persian rugs damaged in moving, and their old master paintings injured, and how their barrels of fine cut glass were dashed around carelessly, and how many times their Chippendale furniture was scratched. But they stuck it out 204 years. Hats off to each of them.

When I told our janitor that four preachers moved 7,700 miles, he remarked, "Dem sho is travelin' preachers all right."

Bishop Moore in a Hot Spot.
In Bishop Arthur J. Moore's ordinary run-of-mine daily program there arise uncounted difficult situations to master, and problems to solve. But he always knows the answers. However, there arose one time a situation that really had the bishop in a hot spot. He was presiding at an annual conference in Czechoslovakia, at Prague, after the Germans had very thoughtfully occupied that land to "protect" it against itself and the spirit of democracy. Attending the conference, and seated on the very front pew, were a dozen members of the celebrated and notorious goose-stepping German Gestapo, watching every move the bishop made, and weighing every word he spoke. Naturally, such a situation would cramp the bishop's style, and might possibly inspire his feet to want to travel; but he came out of the ordeal with flying colors and without compromise of his religious convictions.

Chickens Worry the Preachers.
These Methodist preachers are up in the air, and plenty worried by the chickens. And I'm not talking about Peachtree street chickens, but the old-fashioned domestic variety. Methodist parsons' traditional fondness for chicken is causing complications, even affecting the appointments, as so many of them contemplate transferring.

For instance, down at Bainbridge, Ga., Frank Silas has a turkey with four legs and three wings. Mrs. Munster, of Dallas, Texas, has a hen with three hearts, and J. L. House, of the Troup county Gray Hill section, has chickens with five legs. Then the Polk county hens in the neighborhood of Rockmart are laying double-yolk eggs. These items of fact sorely disturb the brethren, making some of them want to transfer. You see preachers gathered in crap-shooting huddles all around talking about the situation. And they fail on each other's shoulders weeping, as they recall that, a few months ago, in a storm between Macon and Columbus 2,700 frying-size roosters were killed. The thought comes that none of those young roosters would have made good laymen.

Bishop "Mows 'Em Down."
Several groups of "saints" who are willing to hedge a bit on the interpretation of the law and compromise a principle, have learned that Bishop Moore is not so easily swayed. Some of them wrote the bishop asking him to do something contrary to Methodist law and policy. He pinned their ears back as flat as battercakes 24 hours old. Said the bishop: "I shall follow the law." I'll tell you, folks: If you want to engage in something wrong, you had best not try to get Bishop Moore as a partner.

So Direct Now.
An annual conference gathering today is so different from what it was in the long, long ago. In "them" days long-tailed coats and whiskers were as common at conference as pig tracks in a pasture; but now you don't see a single bunch of "whiskers in a cowpen" of parsons. As to the long coat tails, I don't know whether priorities on wool or keeping up with the streamer in fashion is what's cut the tails to a high-water mark.

In the days of long ago laymen were few and far between, with absolutely none of the feminine persuasion present; but today, just look at 'em. There are nearly as many laymen as ecclesiastics—333 by actual count, with 65 of 'em women, and seven of the dear sisters wives of active preachers. Man, the laymen and the women have certainly "come to town" at an annual conference. And I don't mean maybe.

EPISCOPAL COLLEAGUES—Bishop Arthur J. Moore (left), North Georgia Methodist Conference president, Atlanta's resident bishop, and Bishop Edwin F. Lee, of New York, bishop in charge of Methodist mission work in the Philippine Islands and Malaya. Picture shows Bishop Moore calling conference session to order.

In the days long past conference sessions began shortly after day-by time, and kept going until "the frost was on the pumpkin and the fodder in the shock." But look at us now, with our twin-cylinder, streamlined organization. We meet just 'fore milking time on Thursday, get through with everything and get back home Sunday evening in time for the early candlelight prayer meeting. Look at our dust!

In the days of yore, when anybody wanted to talk with a bishop or district superintendent about the preacher, Nicodemus-like, as if they were robbing a chicken roost, they went under cover of darkness and spoke in secret whispers. But look at it now. In broad-open daylight they have opportunity to consult with the powers that be. And boy, do they go! I'll say. The maker of a better mousetrap may have had a path beaten to his door; but the saints and sinners make more than a path to the place of consultation.

For 38 years now I have been a member of this conference. I've heard many, many things about preachers. I'll say this: If just one-half of what scheming persons have told me about preachers is true, every last mother's son of 'em ought to be in the chain gang. Character assassins I call 'em, the folks who can't say to a preacher's face what they say behind his back.

Bishop Moore Cites Progress Of Methodists

Moore will read the appointments at that time.

Three Methodist bishops participated in the first day's conference program. Bishop Edwin F. Lee, of New York, bishop in charge of mission work in the Philippines and Malaya, was heard in a brief address, and Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, senior Methodist bishop, of Washington City, delivered his noted lecture on Francis Asbury, pioneer Methodist circuit rider and bishop.

In his opening address Bishop Moore stressed the challenge that comes to the church today. "Our boasted civilization is shaking because it has not been founded on a moral basis," said he. "The church cannot stand aside and say that the world's distress is not its concern; to do so is to forfeit our place in the eternal purpose of God. The church must venture forth on dark nights to find lost sheep and save perishing sinners. The church must come into this difficult world situation, and declare the ancient message that 'man does not live by bread alone.'"

Prior to the formal opening of the annual conference session members of the Widows and Orphans Aid Association held a special meeting at 2 o'clock, and, with only one vote opposing, voted to dissolve the association and distribute the assets among the 70 members in good standing since 1912.

A committee consisting of W. S. Robison, Elam F. Dempsey and Thomas M. Elliott, named a year ago to make a study of the association's affairs and make recommendations for future procedure, recommended dissolution. The committee reported a present membership of 70, with a total years of membership of 1,576 years. Distribution is to be prorated on the number of years membership has been held since 1912.

Total assets of the association were shown to be $12,267.91, of which sum $6,517.91 is liquid and immediately available for distribution. The remainder of assets is held in six mortgages and in bonds. Members of the association voted that the present committee be continued and authorized to make final distribution. Distribution of the liquid assets, $6,517.91, will be made within the next 10 days, it was announced. The yearly average adopted for distribution will approximate some $3.69 per year.

Dr. W. T. Hunnicutt, secretary-treasurer for 21 years, stated that, during that time, the association had not lost so much as a dime in loans. He also stated that the association in former years enjoyed so large a membership that as much as $500 would be given families of deceased ministers who were members of the group. Organized more than 60 years ago for the purpose of giving aid to deceased ministers' families, the association has given help to an average of six families per year. This year only two claims were made, while last year more than three times that many were aided. Group insurance, death benefit funds, and other forms of mutual helpfulness were given as the cause of loss of interest in the movement.

Five Admitted.
Five young ministers were voted admission on trial in the conference, as follows: The Rev. Henry Oscar Green, from the Athens-Elberton district; the Rev. Rembert Autrell Green, from the Atlanta East district; the Rev. Samuel Leon Laird Jr., also from the Atlanta East district; the Rev. Dumas Broughton Shellnut, from the Atlanta West district, and the last conference: the Rev. J. R. Allen, of Rome; the Rev. E. B. Aycock, of Statham; the Rev. J. W. Coffman, of Cumming; the Rev. J. H. Farr, of Milledgeville; the Rev. J. H. House, of Lake Park; the Rev. J. D. Posey, of Eatonton; the Rev. H. M. Strozio, of Marietta, and Bishop W. N. Ainsworth.

Brief biographical sketches of the seven were given in order by the following ministers: W. H. LaPrade, E. J. Hammond, Claude Hendrick, E. F. Dempsey, C. R. Jenkins, B. A. Chastain, B. C. Gamble and W. F. Quillian. A special music number was rendered by Mrs. A. B. Cunyus, and a memorial address delivered by the Rev. H. C. Emory.

Features of the conference program for today, which begins at 9 o'clock, embrace reports from district superintendents, passage of pastors' characters, report by Conference Lay Leader Johnston, and report of women's work by Mrs. L. M. Awtrey. A recognition service for retired ministers will be held at noon. At the evening hour, 8 o'clock, Bishop Hughes again will speak.

34 Get Certificates in First Camouflage Course for South

By BETTY MATHIS.
A long step forward in the defense of Atlanta against possible air attack was marked here last night with the awarding of certificates to 34 Atlantans upon the successful completion of the first course in industrial camouflage yet offered in the south.

The course, offered at Georgia Tech under the direction of Harold Bush-Brown, head of the department of architecture, covered a ten-week period and consisted of 50 hours of classroom work, plus the working out of a selected camouflage problem either with scale models or scale drawings. Twenty-six of the students, local architects, engineers, landscape architects, artists and those of allied professions, received certificates from the Office of Civilian Defense, Washington. The other graduates, who did not meet the OCD requirements as to professional experience, were awarded certificates from the Evening School of Applied Science. The certificates were presented at a dinner held in the Tech banquet hall.

Problems Chosen
Problems chosen by the students for applying their classroom knowledge included an airport, a powder dam and a manufacturing establishment now engaged in producing war materials—all potential military objectives—and the Georgia Tech campus, which because of its ROTC installations and concentration of population also might be selected as a target for enemy bombs.

Just what the students did in the way of disguising the campus in this all on paper, but has not been put into effect, and probably won't be) was this: Grant Field, presenting the most difficult part of the problem, had the stadium seats covered with fish nets, garnished with fake shrubbery and dummy houses to make it appear to be a continuation of the Techwood Housing Project. The field itself was spotted with dummy houses. The athletic and Navy buildings were covered with nets and garishings stretched across Third street down to the little park north of the stadium (but permitting passage of traffic underneath).

School Buildings.
Buildings of the school were toned down with paint. In some cases flat tops were added to simulate the near-by housing project, and in other cases, skillful painting of the buildings made them appear to be groups of small residences.

The problem of the smoke stack and the tower of the main building was met by converting them into apparently harmless looking churches. Walkways on the green in front of the main building were eliminated by paint and false planting and a false walkway substituted.

The most subtle touch of the entire camouflage problem was the construction of a dummy stadium at the site of the present Rose Bowl with dummy buildings north of it. And in order to fool an enemy bomber even more, a skillfully poor job of camouflage was done on the fake Grant Field so that any smart bombardier could spot in a minute.

In addition to Professor Bush-Brown, instructors included J. Warren Armistead, OCD regional plant protection chief and camouflage specialist, and Lewis E. Crook Jr., Atlanta architect, both of whom are graduates of the second civilian camouflage course given by the Army Engineers at Fort Belvoir, Va. Tech faculty members and lecturers from Philadelphia and New York also assisted in teaching.

Those receiving OCD certificates included George Dickey Bar-

The course will be repeated if there is a demand for it, Bush-Brown said.

Raleigh Man Named Head of Banker Group

Edward A. Wayne Elected at Annual Parley Held Here.

Edward A. Wayne, of Raleigh, N. C., was named president of the Secretaries of Southern States Bankers' Association at the close of the annual convention last night in the Biltmore hotel and the association pledged full support to the government in the war effort.

Wayne, secretary of the North Carolina Bankers' Association, succeeded J. Carlisle Rogers, of Leesburg, Fla.

Roland L. Adams, of York, Ala., secretary of the Alabama Bankers' Association, was elected vice president, and R. I. Didier, of Baton Rouge, La., secretary of the Louisiana association, was named secretary-treasurer.

The resolution stated: "... The banks of the United States have done yeoman service in the sale of war savings bonds to the public, having willingly and gladly issued approximately 85 per cent of the total sales to date as a service without compensation."

"... It is obvious that this service must be continued and that in connection with the forthcoming victory financing campaign much educational and functional work will be necessary."

"... We recognize that co-operation in the sound financing of our war effort constitutes the first objective of our own efforts."

"Members of this association pledge their wholehearted support to the government of the United States, to the Federal Reserve Bank, to the war savings committees and to the victory fund organization, in their efforts to continue and greatly increase the sale of war bonds to the end that our necessary war financing may proceed with all due speed and in such a manner to preserve our American system."

The association also adopted a resolution expressing pride in four state secretaries who have gone into service—William E. Martin, of South Carolina; Ralph Fontaine, of Kentucky; John Payne, of Virginia, and Bradford McFadden, of Georgia.

Bankers also voted full co-operation in the food for freedom program, outlining a program of co-operation in each state with university extension services and county agents to see that individual state food production quotas are met.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon a manpower clinic of the American Bankers' Association will be held at the Biltmore to work out a program for replacing bank personnel drafted into military services.

Major Also Wished for Another Gallon

Atlantans facing the loss of that fourth gallon of gas a week, can compare that sunk feeling caused by the cough of a gasless motor, to the experience of a Georgia officer home from the Pacific—and they'll feel better promptly.

Major Ben S. Irvin, 24, on his way home to Washington, Ga., on "Hogs Grow Fast" yesterday, was flying with a group of other officers over the jungles of Borneo with the gas gauge registering close to empty. "For awhile we thought we were going to die," the youthful major admitted, "but finally we identified a river in the jungle and found our way to an airport with only about 10 minutes' fuel supply left."

Major Irvin was a second lieutenant when he left the United States for Manila last November. His sister, Mrs. Harold Martin, of Washington, Ga., met him in Atlanta yesterday.

HOGS GROW FAST.

Resist Anglo-Saxon 'Aggression,' Petain Tells French

LONDON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Marshal Philippe Petain called on all Frenchmen in North Africa tonight "to resist the Anglo-Saxon aggression," and fighting French sources here saw this as fresh evidence of Dictator Pierre Laval's calculated efforts to steer his country into outright military alliance with Germany.

Nation Must Sacrifice, Say War Leaders

Country Faces Hardships Rather Than Deny Its Soldiers.

BOSTON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Two civilian war leaders served notice today the nation faces the sacrifice choice "between baby carriages and bullets" and possibly risking pneumonia rather than deny fuel oil to our fighters.

At the same time, a business chief said privately that the nation must plan now to furnish post-war employment or "the state will be the employer" and the country will become state-dominated.

The declarations in behalf of greater civilian sacrifice were made by Man Power Chairman Paul V. McNutt and Price Administrator Leon Henderson, while U. S. Chamber of Commerce President Eric A. Johnston sounded the employment challenge at the first New England war conference.

F. D. R. Praised.

The meeting was praised by President Roosevelt in a message declaring:

"The free exchange of ideas through regional discussion can be of first value to the conduct of our war. It can also pave the way for the better world we are resolved to create out of this war."

Declaring it is only common sense for manufacturers making less essential civilian supplies "to get ready for drastic changes," McNutt said:

"You do not have to look into a crystal ball to see the future. It should be obvious to anyone that if a choice must be made between candy and caissons, between baby carriages and bullets, between stoves and shells, we—and not our soldiers—will have to do without."

Oil Shortage.

Discussing the east coast oil shortage, Price Administrator Henderson declared at a press conference that "if it ever came to a choice between risking pneumonia and getting oil, and not our soldiers going into Tunisia, I don't think any medical director would fail to choose the latter."

William L. Batt, vice chairman of the War Production Board, sounded a note kindred to that of McNutt and Henderson when he said:

"We now realize that, by standards elsewhere, we have been a rich, carefree, soft, undisciplined people. We must become temporarily poor again, and do it voluntarily. We must become hard, business-like, disciplined, efficient warriors."

Medical Staffs Will Be Short, Colonel Says

Army Chief Promises Unbelievable Work to Doctors.

Anticipating a large cut in medical personnel by January 1 because of overseas assignments, Colonel Sanford W. French, chief of the medical branch of headquarters, Fourth Service Command, yesterday told the chiefs of medical and surgical services from this area that the "medical corps will be called upon to do more than we may believe we are capable of from now on."

The group, assembled here for a three-day conference at the Ansley hotel, was told there "just aren't enough doctors, it seems," and that those who do not go overseas will be called upon to do that much more.

Members of the conference were welcomed by Major General William Bryden, commanding general of the Service Command, who urged them to call on headquarters for help with their problems and of the laboratory, adding "the real work is being done by you men in the field, and we are here to help you."

"I reiterate to you the order to resist the Anglo-Saxon aggression," continued the aged marshal, whose prestige derived mainly from fighting the Germans at Verdun in the last World War.

"We live tragic hours. Disorder reigns in minds. You hear news which has no other aim but to injure and weaken you."

"The truth however is simple. It is necessary that you submit to the discipline that I exact from each of you or you endanger your country."

"In the interest of France I have decided to accord powers to Premier Laval to permit him to fulfill a difficult task. Union is more than ever indispensable. I remain your guide. You have only the duty. Obey! You have but one government: that to which I have given the power to govern. You have but one country which is incarnate: France."

Weygand's Whereabouts. Leon Morand, prominent French trade unionist, who has just escaped from Vichy, France to join the Fighting French here, said General Maxime Weygand, former French North African commander, was arrested by the Gestapo during the Nazi occupation of the remainder of France.

Although Morand said Weygand was released 24 hours later by the Germans, the Rome radio in a domestic broadcast said "it was officially confirmed that General Weygand is under arrest in Germany."

Workers March.

At the time the Marshal was broadcasting the German-controlled Paris radio was announcing that three more trainloads of French workers were leaving for German factories.

The Paris radio said French and German authorities had agreed on a total of 75,000 to be dispatched in exchange for the release of 25,000 French war prisoners.

There are 1,000,000 or more war prisoners in Germany.

One purpose of the German coup d'etat at Vichy, as one source called the elevation of Laval yesterday, was believed to be to facilitate an alliance which would grant the Axis the use of about 64 French warships still based at Nazi-ruled Toulon.

A prerequisite for alliance probably would be a formal peace treaty to replace the 1940 armistice, now a dead letter by reason of Germany's occupation of all France.

Aim of the Vichy shift, said one British diplomatic source, was to get rid of Petain.

The possibility of a Vichy war against the Allies also was mentioned by the Berlin radio which, during frequent comment today on Laval's elevation said: "Marshal Petain was not pushed from the throne. A number of powers still are in his hands, particularly the right to make pacts and declare war. This in particular is playing a great role at present."

'Son' of British Indian Official Warns Allies in Nazi Radiocast

By EDWIN SHANKE.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—A speaker introduced on the German radio tonight as John Amery, son of the British Secretary of State for India, declared the Allies could not win, denounced Jews and Communists and appealed to the British people to "stop the war" against Germany.

In London the British cabinet member, L. S. Amery, listened to the broadcast and then said:

"The voice did not sound like my son's nor did the material." The broadcast had been widely advertised by the Nazis in advance.

Amery's son, John, had been living in the south of France to use the benefits of sunshine for a lung ailment and was supposedly still there when the Germans overran the previously unoccupied zone last week.

The speaker on the German radio tonight said:

"There can no longer be a British victory. Only those who think there might be an American victory."

"You alone can stop this war," he told the British. "You alone can save us from the men who have brought our country so low, who against every British interest

'Priority' Urged On Trolleys for War Workers

Avoid Carrying Bundles During Rush Hours, Shoppers Told.

Atlanta shoppers must decide between taking their Christmas packages home on crowded public transportation facilities during rush hours or allowing war workers to get back and forth to their jobs, it was indicated last night in an announcement made by Guy Kelsey, ODT's local transport manager.

"A hatbox," Kelsey pointed out, "takes up enough space to crowd out another passenger on a well-filled bus. There just won't be room for war workers and bundles on the same homeward-bound cars and buses during late afternoon peak hours."

Then, too, packages make movement difficult in crowded vehicles and necessitate longer stops, which, in these times, throw the public transportation system out of gear.

The announcement was emphatic, however, in asking that shoppers carry all possible packages with them—but in off-peak hours. This is necessitated by a 25 per cent reduction in store deliveries since last year.

Among other admonitions to Christmas buyers were these:

Do your buying immediately. Stores cannot make special delivery trips, so make your purchases well in advance and let the merchant plan delivery on his regular trips to your neighborhood, maybe a week or more apart. In this way you avoid the risk of having Christmas morning arrive before junior's tricycle.

Above all, plan to stay put during the holiday season. The railroads and buses have all they can do to carry soldiers and sailors and Christmas travel just can't be handled as usual. If you can get a seat and take your trip you can count on it that some soldier planning a trip home will have to stay at his post instead.

Civilian government employees, with out-of-town leaves cancelled during the holiday season, are setting the example.

MEAT ALLOWANCE.

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 19.—Meat slaughtered on the farms for home use and that which families purchase in quantities for storage in freezer locker, should be counted in the 2 1/2 pound weekly sharing allowance, according to the Extension Service.

McCallie To Move For Reaccrediting Of Georgia Schools

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Dr. Spencer J. McCallie, a former president of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, said today he had made conditional plans to move for the reinstatement in the association, of Georgia's state colleges and university, dropped last year after charges of political interference from Governor Talmadge's administration.

Dr. McCallie, headmaster of the McCallie school and a longtime member of the association's executive committee, said his action would be conditioned on the Georgia legislature enacting measures to prevent the recurrence of the "political interference" charges. Governor-elect Arnall, of Georgia, has said he intended to appear before the association at its meeting in Memphis next week in behalf of the schools, stricken from the organization's accredited lists.

"There is no doubt but that the association will recognize the good faith of Georgia," Dr. McCallie asserted in an interview. "It is my judgment that the association will vest in its executive committee, or some other appropriate committee, the power to reinstate the Georgia schools to the accredited list when, and if, the Georgia legislature enacts legislation that will remove its university system from political influences."

"If no one else will make the motion to reinstate the Georgia schools on the basis I have outlined, I will do it myself and take the lead in getting the motion adopted. I anticipate no difficulty in getting my position sustained."

FRAT LEADER—Dr. William B. Ricks, of Nashville, Tenn., national president of Sigma Chi fraternity, said here last night wartime college students are adopting a serious attitude.

'War' Students Are Praised by Sigma Chi Head
Schools Carrying on Despite Conflict, Says Dr. Ricks.

Dr. William B. Ricks, national president of Sigma Chi fraternity, said here last night wartime students in the United States and Canada have adopted a serious attitude and are doing better work than at any other time in history.

"I have found that most of the schools are carrying on well despite the war and, especially in Canada, the students are adapting themselves to serious study and are consequently doing better work," Dr. Ricks said in an interview.

Dr. Ricks has visited nearly all of the 100 Sigma Chi chapters and the 125 alumni chapters in the United States and Canada in the past few months.

He declared that after almost four years of war most of the schools in Canada are "still going strong."

"The Canadian government is keeping its boys in college and giving them special technical courses and military training. As long as the boys pass the work they are allowed to remain in school and complete their training before being taken into the service."

"I believe that if America is wise she will do the same thing. In that way she can train a great number of men who will be capable of running our Army."

He said he believed the United States should make military training and technical courses an essential part of the regular routine in American schools.

Dr. Ricks arrived here last night from his home in Nashville, Tenn. He will speak tonight at a stag banquet given by the Atlanta Alumni chapter in honor of himself and pledges of the Georgia Tech and Emory chapters. The subject of his address will be "Fraternities in Relation to the War."

About 150 persons are expected to attend the banquet which will begin at 7 o'clock at the Atlanta Lawyers' Club, and the 125 Alumni chapters in the

Purely Personal Chatter About Atlanta Debutantes

Editor's Note: This is the twelfth of a series of sketches giving intimate glimpses into the lives of Atlanta debutantes. Banning all social functions in their honor, this season's buds have voted to concentrate on war and defense work, their efforts along this line to be revealed in this series.

By SALLY FORTH.

• • • IF YOU'RE a style-conscious gadabout who notices striking people in stunning clothes, you have, upon numerous occasions, admired Kay Young, exotic debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cassels Young.

For Kay is an extremely glamorous individual, and her excellent taste in feminine attire places her in the category of Atlanta's best-dressed girls.

Black is particularly becoming to her, and she wears it both for evening and for daytime. The severity of her gowns is usually enlivened by an Eisenberg clip—or by a handsome pair of huge and brilliant earrings.

Kay is noted for her poise, her charm and her popularity. During her enrollment at North Fulton High school, where she was a member of the Phi Pi sorority and the Pirate Club, she was elected sponsor for both the S. P. M. high school fraternity and the Kappa Alpha fraternity at Emory University. Which is quite a feather in any sub-deb's cap!

This vivacious brunet deb is combining her debut season with college. She is a senior at the University of Georgia, where she is majoring in sociology. Her capability along executive lines is proven by the fact that she holds the presidency of the Phi Mu sorority, as well as the assistant woman's editorship of the Red and Black, outstanding college newspaper. Kay also serves on the Panhellenic Council. She thinks newspaper work is fascinating.

This attractive debutante is partial to convertible coupes, popular classical music, vivid colors, unusual people, historical novels, football games and—hold your hats, ladies—Cary Grant! She dislikes mathematics,

KAY YOUNG.

Luncheon Fetes Miss Ann Austin

The Mirador room of the Capital City Club formed the setting yesterday for the luncheon at which Mrs. M. J. Carroll entertained as a complimentary gesture to Miss Ann Austin. Miss Austin's marriage to Captain Donald C. Johnston takes place tomorrow evening at St. Philip's Cathedral.

White chrysanthemums centered the table, and appointments featured the bridal motif. Covers were placed for the bride-elect; her mother, Mrs. G. A. Austin; the hostess, Mrs. Hilton Wall; Miss Kathryn Barnwell and Mrs. William Crittenden.

fussy dresses with bows on them, writing letters—and Victor Mature!

• • • THE PHI PI freshmen elected officers at the meeting held Wednesday afternoon with Margaret Wilkins as hostess, with the result that Laura Burgess is their president, Julia Pennington is vice president, Alice Mitchell is secretary, and Frances Stribling is treasurer.

Laura will act as official hostess when the freshmen entertain at their formal dance tomorrow evening in the ballroom at the Biltmore, and she will be assisted by the other three officers.

• • • BETTY RAYFIELD, the blond and pretty daughter of the Frederick Rayfields, has been inducted into the Delta Alpha sorority at the Gulf Park Junior College at Gulfport, Miss. She was chosen by the president of the sorority to be her "Torch Bearer," which is quite an honor for a senior to confer upon a freshman. Betty possesses a voice of exquisite tone and quality and belongs to the Glee Club.

Just recently, Betty and her roommate, Barbara Redd, who hails from Anderson, Ohio, went to New Orleans to attend the Mississippi-Tulane football game, and they were feted at lots of college affairs. Betty is perfectly charmed with her college, and writes her parents that she is exceedingly happy. She is making great progress in her studies, and is demonstrating her aquatic accomplishments in the swimming pool on the college campus as well as in the Gulf of Mexico.

• • • IF YOU are planning to attend the painting demonstration at the Academy of Medicine this evening, you will see one of America's greatest artists in action. For Alexander Brook will paint a portrait of a living model right before your eyes, explaining the technique of painting as he goes. One of the High Museum Art School students, Elizabeth Locher, of Glasgow, Va., will be the model. Other students of the school will act as ushers for the demonstration.

Afterwards a reception in Mr. Brook's honor will be held at the High Museum, with members of the Junior League as hostesses. Dorothy (Mrs. Francis) Mitchell is chairman in charge of the reception, which will assemble members of the Atlanta Art Association.

Mrs. J. O'H. Sanders has planned a tea for Mr. Brook on Saturday at her home on Manor Ridge drive. Members of art circles will be invited to meet the artist at 4 o'clock, and assisting the hostess in entertaining will be Mrs. Edna Turner and Mrs. Myrtle Folsome, of the Museum staff; Mrs. Herbert Oliver, Mrs. T. K. Glenn and Mrs. Walter Hill.

• • • THE THANKSGIVING holidays will be especially gay for Jeanne McGovern, who is a student at the College of St. Elizabeth in Convent Station, New Jersey. News received by the popular belle's mother, Mrs. Paul J. McGovern, reveals that Jeanne leaves next Wednesday for West Hartford, Conn., to attend a house party given by Betty Jean Warner.

Betty Jean is the daughter of Mrs. Kenneth B. Warner, who spent countless holidays with Jeanne's mother during their young ladyhood. The house party will assemble friends of the hostess enrolled at Smith College and St. Elizabeth's, and will take place at the home of the Kenneth B. Warners.

A highlight of the Thanksgiving holidays for Jeanne will be the tea-dance at which juniors at St. Elizabeth's will honor the freshmen next week at the Waldorf hotel in New York. The popular Atlantian will attend the party with Lieutenant Raymond Wessel, of Fort Benning, who will be in New York on leave. Her cousins, Lawrence Fagan and James O'Brien, both of whom are students at Yale, will also be among the guests—so it is no wonder that Jeanne has decided to spend the holidays in the east!

• • • ATLANTANS WILL learn with interest of the recent marriage of Charlotte Montague Force to Technical Sergeant Paul Annerud, of Fort Bliss, which took place in El Paso, Texas. For the lovely bride was born in Atlanta and has hosts of relatives here. The daughter of Mr. Philip Howell Force, of El Paso, she is the granddaughter of the late Dr. J. W. Logan, who taught here for many years. Her grandmother Logan was before her marriage Miss Eliza Calhoun, a member of the prominent Calhoun family of Georgia and South Carolina.

The bride's father is also descended from a prominent Atlanta family, having been the son of Albert Force, who owned and operated the famous Force shoe store here many years ago.

The marriage of the young couple took place at the Force home in El Paso, and they are residing in El Paso during the groom's station at Fort Bliss. The bride, who is the sister of Philip Force Jr., is a student at the College of Mines.

LIEUTENANT AND MRS. ALEXANDER G. LITTLE.

Miss Adair and Lieut. Little Marry at Church Ceremony

Fashionable members of Atlanta society assembled last evening at the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church for the marriage of Miss Roline Clarke Adair to Lieutenant Alexander Graham Little Jr., of Valdosta, United States Medical Corps. The impressive ceremony was performed at 8:30 o'clock by Dr. Ryland Knight, pastor of the church, and Mrs. Charles Chalmers presented the musical program.

Stately palms formed the background for the vases filled with white chrysanthemums and gladioli which beautified the altar. Seven-branched candelabra held gleaming white tapers and the altar rail was entwined with smilax.

Russell R. Porter, Logan Clarke, uncle of the bride; Captain James McClintock, Captain William Nealand, Captain Jack Beckwith and Lieutenant Nat Turnbull were ushers. Miss Foster Adair, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Mrs. David C. Black Jr. was matron of honor. They wore gowns made of tropical rose chiffon featuring long waists and full skirts. They carried bouquets of salisman roses, blue delphinium, snapdragons and African daisies.

Beautiful Brunet Bride. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Augustus D. Adair, with whom she entered the church. They were met at the altar by Major Augustus D. Adair Jr., United States Air Corps, brother of the bride. The bride's beauty of the bride was accentuated by her regal gown made of heirloom lace and antique ivory satin. Lace formed the long-waisted bodice and short, puffed sleeves, and the long and graceful train was built into the back of the full skirt. The antique tulle veil was fastened to the bride's wavy brown hair with a wreath of orange blossoms, and she wore a strand of pearls. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and swainsons tied with antique satin ribbon.

Mrs. Adair, mother of the bride, wore a gown featuring an embroidered French blue net bodice and blue crepe skirt. Her flowers were orchids. Mrs. Alexander G. Little, of Valdosta, mother of the bridegroom, wore a Samuel Kass model, fashioned with a black lace bodice and black crepe skirt, and her flowers were orchids. Mrs. John S. Clarke, grandmother of the bride, was gowned in a white crepe model trimmed with rhinestones and her flowers were orchids. Mrs. Calvin M. McClung, of Knoxville, Tenn., aunt of the bride, wore a red velvet gown and orchids adorned her shoulder. Mrs. Walter Hodges, of Greenville, S. C., aunt of the bridegroom, was gowned in salute blue crepe, and her flowers were orchids.

Reception Given at Club. Mr. and Mrs. Adair entertained at an elegant reception after the ceremony in the ballroom of the Piedmont Driving Club, in compliance to their daughter and Lieutenant Little. Palms formed the background for the standards holding white flowers which added to the artistic arrangement. Dr. and Mrs. Little, parents of the bridegroom, and Mr. and Mrs. John S. Clarke, grandparents of the bride, assisted in receiving.

The buffet tables were overlaid with white satin cloths and silver vases held white flowers. White tapers glowed in silver candelabra, and festoons of smilax decorated the sides of the table. An orchestra discoursed the musical program during the reception. Coffee was served from a silver service placed at either end of the exquisitely appointed tables.

Wedding Trip to Miami. Lieutenant Little and his bride departed on their wedding trip to Miami, Fla., where they will spend 10 days. Upon their return to Atlanta they will reside at 2793 Peachtree road, and will be attractive additions to the younger married contingent of society. Mrs. Little traveled in a beige woolen dress, and the coat to match was trimmed with beaver fur. A becoming beaver hat and brown accessories completed her stylish ensemble and she wore orchids on her shoulder.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Camp To Mark 50th Anniversary

DALLAS, Ga., Nov. 19.—Among important events of the weekend will be the celebration on Sunday of the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Jackson Camp, beloved and prominent residents of north Georgia. Mrs. Camp is the former Miss Elizabeth Perkinson, the daughter of Thomas Jefferson Perkinson and Sophia C. McLarty Perkinson, of Cobb county. Mr. and Mrs. Camp were married on November 22, 1892.

Mr. and Mrs. Camp have six children: Miss Blanche Camp, of Monroe; Lamar Camp, an attorney, of Rome; Andrew J. Camp Jr., of this city; Seaborn M. Camp, of Meridian, Miss.; Max Camp, of Detroit, Mich.; and Bert T. Camp, of Bradenton, Fla., now stationed at Camp Blanding.

Wife Who Remarries a 'Wanderer' Must Have Her Eyes Wide Open

Dear Dixie:

I married at 25. The man was to me the most wonderful person in the world. Somehow I still think he is rather grand despite what he has done. After two years of married life, he informed me that our marriage was a mistake and that he wanted a divorce. He told me there was no other way, although they were not married.

The man cannot be depended upon, and if you go back to him right away, you can be sure that there is a possibility that he may walk out on you again. You say you still love him, so from your viewpoint that is a different story. If you love him enough to overlook his actions and suffer from his treatment to you, then you can go back to him, and have only yourself to blame for his future actions.

There is a possibility that he has realized his misstep and found that after all you are the one woman in his life and that he only needed another affair to bring him to his senses. Don't be in too big a hurry to take him back but let him know that you realize that he has had an affair with another woman. Let him know that it will be his job to win your love back again. If he really loves you he will do what he can. There are a lot of men who have to learn the real meaning of love by hurting the very one whom they love. I am not saying that your husband is this type, but you can give him the chance to redeem himself. That is if you still love him, and I think you do. But I'm warning you. Your life will not be completely happy with him, because deep inside of you there will be that worry that he may roam again.

any faith in him again. It is very hard to have faith in anyone who has turned so against you. He walked out on you once, and you have knowledge that he has done this co-worker of yours the same way, although they were not married.

MY DAY: The President Meets the Plane

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday.—Nearing Washington, yesterday, was just like any other flight from some point in our country. The plane we were in looked a little different and our companions were not the usual ones who fill a plane on an everyday trip. Outside of the crew, every boy on board was a returning member of a crew which had delivered a war plane to a country overseas. Talking with them was both interesting and entertaining.

We had flown over the water and the journey had covered a good many hours, so Miss Thompson and I meant what we said when we thanked our pilot and the crew for an exceptionally comfortable trip. I was surprised to see the secret service standing around the cars, which I knew meant the President was there to meet us. In a way, I feel as though I had not been gone at all, and in another way it seems as though I had been gone for ages.

Work here starts just where it left off and, so far as I can tell, we shall be busy in much the same way as if we had not gone at all. There is one little addition, a number of people think it would be nice if I could manage to attend a meeting for a few minutes to tell them all about Great Britain.

I wish I could, for I would like to tell every person in the entire country, but I am afraid I shall have to trust to doing some radio broadcasts and keeping such engagements as I have already made. For the coming week I have had to cancel certain engagements because of various visitors and obligations which have come up in the White House while I was gone. After that, I hope not to have to disappoint any people to whom I have already promised appointments.

A number of people came to see me yesterday and there is still a great thrill in sharing recent impressions with really interested friends. I lunched with my husband in his office, which is something I only do on particular occasions. I called my daughter in Seattle, Wash., last night, which is another pleasure I very rarely allow myself. Tonight I hope to speak to Elliott's wife, Ruth, who is a nurse and anxious to get news of her husband, who is in the service.

The President and I dined alone, and I went to listen to him make his broadcast for the Herald Tribune Forum. I was sorry not to be able this year to be on the program, but it seemed impossible to know beforehand when I would be back in this country. As it turned out, it was fortunate I made no plans, for I could not possibly have reached New York City in time.

This morning I had a very large press conference. I am gradually getting through the mail and the business which must be done before I am ready to start with a clean slate again.

Then one day she did not come to work. After three days of absence I inquired about her and one of the women told me that she had left town. I wondered about her and where she would go and especially about him. I thought the less interest I showed the more I could find out. And I did. One of the girls told me that this woman had written that she could not take it any longer, that this man had walked out on her, refused to marry her and told her that he was going back to his wife. "He must be an awful heel," was the comment of my informant. My heart began to sing again. Now I am wondering if I should take him back, if what I have heard is true? What do you think? Must I pick up where we left off and not refer to any of the past? Must I re-marry him?

WIFE LEFT BEHIND.

Personally, I would not take him back. Because I would not have

Your Horoscope For Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21-April 19 (ARIES)—Today favors practical work and dealings with people of a conservative nature. But is a most unwise time to make sudden changes.

April 20-May 20 (TAURUS)—Domestic dealings with women, business for the adornment of home and person, should proceed cautiously. Avoid aggressive people and those who are stubborn.

May 21-June 20 (GEMINI)—You can undertake responsibilities, seek favors, undertake financial duties, and deal with legal and educational affairs to your credit. This is a time to further your ambitions.

June 21-July 22 (CANCER)—Your energy can be well directed today, and this should be a time when you can accomplish desires quickly. Industrial and mechanical affairs are especially favored.

July 23-August 22 (LEO)—Plan to attend to hard and laborious duties, not expecting favors, or of allowances for delays, and this can be made a favorable day.

August 23-September 22 (VIRGO)—You are apt to be filled with decision, energy and vigor during the entire day, but guard your desire for action as it may cause you to have a nervous day.

September 23-October 22 (LIBRA)—Today is a splendid day for achievement, for using your own initiative and personality in new and forceful ways. This is a most favorable day for dealings with people in superior positions.

October 23-November 22 (SCORPIO)—Circumstances are highly desirable, for you are apt to release too much energy, causing extravagance in talk, action and deed. Force your reasoning qualities to come to the front.

November 23-December 21 (SAGITTARIUS)—Dealings with bankers, shipping and foreign affairs are slightly favored. Business connected with liquids may be transacted with favorable results.

December 22-January 19 (CAPRICORN)—Dealings with an original nature and that require much independence of action in affairs and work relating to pleasures are likely to be greatly enjoyed.

January 20-February 18 (AQUARIUS)—Today is a time for cautiousness and moderation. Stained feelings and resentments will have an inclination to go to excess in talking, exercise and diet.

Dr. Brady Offers an Apology

By Dr. William Brady.

The other day I received a letter that irritated and annoyed me. It was from a dentist. He addressed me as William Brady, D. D. S., Dear Doctor, etc. Of course, that was a mistake, but I was flattered. I would feel honored if I had the degree doctor of dental surgery, but the only degree I have is M. D., doctor of medicine.

This dentist began brushing the feathers the wrong way in the first paragraph of his letter:

Dear Doctor:

I am not a reader of your column entitled "Personal Health Service" but an item was brought to my attention by one of my patients who believes in you immensely. This article dealt with the replacement of lost teeth by means of a "peg tooth mounted on a screw which is literally screwed into the jawbone."

Modern bridge work does not even mention this type of restoration. Such a procedure as you mention is not only dangerous but impractical. But when you say that such work can be done I am sure you must have good authority. Out of justice to the modern dentist and to correct certain illusions readers such as my patient may have.

I confess that after I had my fine feathers all smoothed down again and thought the matter over as I tottered over to the bowling green, I saw a great light.

I hereby offer to the dentists of America my sincere apology. I have done American dentistry an injustice, and I shall gladly remain away from the bowling green many a fine afternoon if by so doing I can serve the interest of good dentistry and co-operate more effectively with good dentists everywhere.

The peg tooth thing, mounting an artificial tooth on a kind of screw post, made of vitallium, which is actually screwed into the bone of the jaw to hold the tooth in the vacant space, has been done in certain instances with fair success—and I'll be happy to refer any dentist to the scientific report of the work in dental literature if the dentist provides stamped envelope bearing his address—but I must now admit that this procedure was only experimental and has never been developed in the actual practice of dentistry.

The whole episode of the "peg tooth" is a lesson to me. It goes to show that I should leave technical questions of dentistry to the dentists—and if the dentists are willing to forgive and forget, in future I shall.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Training the Child.

I have trained my 14 months old child since her eighth month for bladder control, but within the past month she refuses to sit on the toilet for either bowel or bladder. (Mrs. S. P.)

Answer—The child is not old enough to have developed a fixed habit. Better ignore the temporary lapse, as it seems and continue your training. Presently she will get back in the groove and stay there. Suggestions in the pamphlet "The Habit of Bed-Wetting" may help. For copy send a three-cent stamped envelope bearing your address.

Blood Donor.
I am 23 years old, 63 inches tall,

110 pounds, good health. Have given a pint of blood to Red Cross and felt no ill effects. Is it safe for a woman to give a pint several times? Girl friend says her doctor advised her it isn't safe, as it results in illness later on. (Miss F. E.)

Answer—It is safe for any healthy person to give a pint of blood several times, in intervals of not less than eight weeks.

Fresh Wheat Germ.
For several years have bought wheat germ in paper bags, always quite fresh. Lately I find it stale and lumpy—perhaps from lying on grocery shelves too long. (B. H. B.)

Answer—Best to buy it from a mill somewhere if you can find one where they will catch out a few pounds of wheat germ every week or two for you. Millers sometimes call it "scalp of the grain" or "middlings and germ." Some mills sell it by mail in quantities of a few pounds, on order. Send stamped envelope bearing your address, for pamphlet "Wheat to Eat" which tells how to make use of plain wheat in the daily diet.

Therapeutic Hotfoot.
Positive and quick cure for "athlete's foot" (ringworm)—submerge feet in water as hot as can be endured for 20 minutes. Ten minutes will not cure, 20 minutes will. (R. H. K.)

Answer—Thank you, sir. Several years ago, Reader E. H. C. reported he held his feet over a heater at 124 degrees fahrenheit (by accurate thermometer) for 20 minutes and cured his foot itch, and he added that he had determined that the feet would stand 128 degrees for that length of time. That degree of heat, if the feet were soaked for that length of time, would probably kill all the fungi or parasites.

Corned Beef.
Is raw beef, whole or minced or hashed, safe to eat raw after immersion for several weeks in strong vinegar—safe from tapeworm or similar parasitic infection? (A. C. R.)

Answer—Such pickling in vinegar destroys the tapeworm parasite in three weeks. However, it is always advisable to cook any meat, and cook it thoroughly, whether it is fresh, corned or salted or pickled raw, or eaten as sausage or similar meat product.

Hot Flashes.
I am 36 years old, and thanks to the "7 Keys to Vite" I feel better than I did at 25, in many ways. But I would like your advice about one thing—heat flashes I get, especially in the week before and during periods—have been "blushing" furiously like this, at the slightest provocation, for the past few years. (Mrs. K. G.)

Answer—Send stamped envelope bearing your address, ask for pamphlet "The Menopause," and follow the suggestions therein for relief of hot flashes.

So You Live in "City"?
Several weeks ago I sent for your booklet "Ills Called Rheumatism" and complied with all instructions, but have never heard from you. (L. G. A.)

Answer—The booklet was found in the "Undeliverable" mail returned by postoffice. You addressed your return envelope "City" and we couldn't guess which of a thousand cities you meant. Sorry.

Chilblains.
You had article on treatment of chilblains in your column last spring. Now that I need information I can't find the item. (L. J.)

Answer—Best prevention—keep feet always dry. If feet are excessively dry, they must be corrected. Avoid rubber covering of feet if possible. Wool, cotton, silk, paper, linen, leather, if dry, is poor heat conductor and hence protects feet from too rapid loss of natural heat or warmth. Bathe chilblains with tepid water, dry by pressing with soft towel, avoid rubbing, powder heavily with talcum or borated talcum powder.

Anne Shirley Has Shapely Legs And She Intends To Show Them

By Harold Heffernan.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 19.—When Anne Shirley—the same little Anne of Green Gables and gingham gowns—was a producer recently because he wouldn't let her show her legs, fans suddenly became aware of the fact that the shy little Cinderella of Movietown had actually grown up.

Fans, and most of the casting directors of Hollywood, believed Anne never would be able to unshackle herself from those namby-pamby characters that are today considered a drug on the modern market. And yet today she is in a fair way of doing so—by going all out for sex appeal.

Anne's a big girl now—grown up, that is. She has legs and curves, and is conscious of the fact. The Anne of Green Gables is a memory, and Anne is convinced that her memory lingered too long in the sexless groove.

That, she told us yesterday, is exactly why she took the film producer into court because he insisted upon substituting another girl's legs for her own in a movie called "Powers Girl."

"Keeping a girl under wraps in a picture like that," said Anne, "is like pointing the finger and saying, 'This one we have to keep covered up because she has—defects.'"

With Anne, the new desire to display sex appeal is purely a professional, box-office complex. Otherwise, she seems just as sweet as when she was child actress, Dawn O'Day.

"It's for career reasons that I intend to be identified eventually as a lady with legs," Anne went on. "A girl in my place may get along without emphasis on sex appeal, but I have my doubts. I don't think it possible any longer for her to hit the top without a reasonable degree of it."

R-K-O studio, to which Anne has been under contract for nearly 10 years, is playing right along with the actress. That's why she'll be well displayed in the company's big air saga, "Bombardier."

"I talked to the producer, Robert Fellows, and to the director, Richard Wallace, about that before we started," Anne confessed. "They promised to see that my role would do something for me in a sex way, although there could be no bathing suit or sun-suit sequences in a story of this nature."

"What they did was even better than I expected. For example, some dialogue was written which will call attention to the new Shirley."

That dialogue, the script of "Bombardier" shows, is coupled with a bit of "business" between Randolph Scott and Pat O'Brien when Pat sees Anne for the first time.

He whistles, "Whee-e, whee!"

Anne gets it but puts on a dignified act, momentarily, and Pat explains, "I was admiring your trajectories."

Anne looks puzzled and Scott explains to her, "In military parlance, trajectories are perfect curves!"

So the former gingham and pigtail girl is pretty happy today with future prospects. Those old roles that got her no place soon will be gone with the wind from a "Bombardier" propeller wash, which in one scene shows her in a moulding of shapely Shirley.

Anne was born Dawn Eveleen Paris on April 17, 1918, in New York city. She has been on stage and screen since babyhood. When she was 16, movies began calling her a "star." At that time she was known as Dawn O'Day.

While playing the Green Gables picture, the young actress fell so in love with the name of the heroine, "Anne Shirley," that she legally adopted it for her own. She married John Payne, the actor, in 1937. In 1940, a daughter was born to them. Several months ago the marriage went on the rocks.

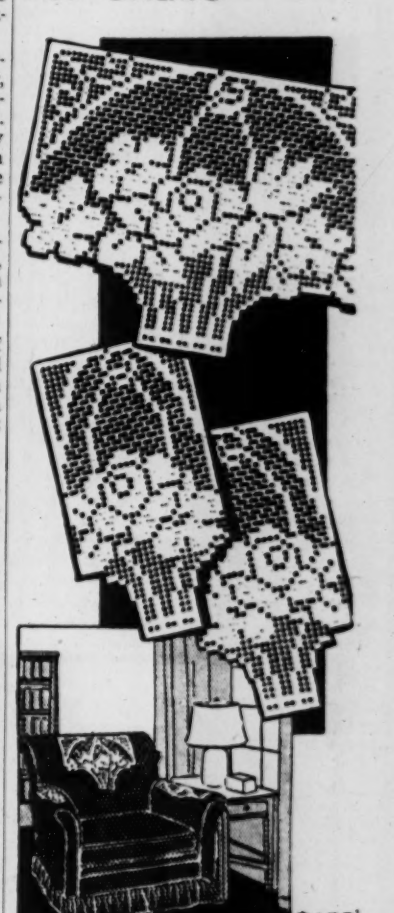

Elloquent of the sort of film career Anne seeks to escape by means of the sex flash is a list of her pictures, which include "Misses," "Girls' School," "Anne of Windy Poplars," "Finishing School," and, of course, "Anne of Green Gables."

Even such roles as that of the wife in "All That Money Can Buy" have held her up as a lady who couldn't match feminine allure with sirens such as Simone Simon.

And then name the Powers picture, full of beautiful models, with Anne singled out as the only one who didn't reveal all the epidermis Mr. Hays would allow!

Miss Trezevant and Lt. Moore Are Married in Marietta

MARIETTA, Ga., Nov. 19.—Miss Matilda Katharine Trezevant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Howell Trezevant, became the bride of Walter Peacock Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Moore, of Atlanta, at a brilliant ceremony taking place at 8 o'clock this evening at St. James Episcopal church here.

Bishop John Moore Walker officiated in the presence of a fashionable assemblage of relatives and friends. Mrs. P. D. Reeser presented a musical program.

Against a background of palms and bamboo placed around the chancel, and before the altar were tall baskets of white chrysanthemums and gladioli interspersed with seven-branched candelabra holding cathedral tapers. The window casings held arrangements of candelabra placed among mounds of greenery. Southern smilax festooned the balcony and candles encircled the rail.

Groomsmen were Verlyn Booth and James Moore, of Atlanta; Chief Petty Officer Carter Peterson, of Athens; Joe Underwood, of Savannah; Ensign L. L. Wiggins, of Atlanta, and Captain J. M. Thrash, of Thelma, Ala.

Mrs. Hugh Roberts, of Cartersville, was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mesdames William Bowen, of Dalton; Robert Fowler, of Marietta; Ben Hill Parham, of Columbus; Charles Brightwell, of Montgomery, and Spencer Howell, of Atlanta. Their gowns were of vision blue faille taffeta fashioned with torso bodice, sweetheart neckline, three-quarter length sleeves, and full-length skirts falling in graceful, flowing lines. In their hair they wore American beauty ostrich tips with matching snoods, and their slippers matched. They carried cascade bouquets of American beauty roses.

Lieutenant Wiley L. Moore was his brother's best man.

Mr. Trezevant gave his daughter in marriage. Her gown was of illusion blue satin, charmingly fashioned with torso bodice and full-length train. The bride's veil was caught to her hair with a coronet of pearls, and she carried a bouquet of white orchids showered with stephanotis. She also carried a handkerchief which had been carried by Mrs. William Vance at her wedding in which the bride was a junior bridesmaid. She wore a four-leaf clover in her slipper, the gift of Mrs. Howard Harmon, of Atlanta.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Trezevant entertained at a reception at the Country Club. Mrs. Trezevant wore a gown of azure blue with orchids and Mrs. Moore, mother of the groom, was gowned in powder blue lace and orchids.

The clubhouse was decorated in white chrysanthemums and gladioli. The bride's table was overlaid with a satin cloth, caught at the sides with bouquets of roses. The table was centered with the square wedding cake, embossed in valley blues and roses. Button chrysanthemums encircled the cake and tall silver vases held "Snow White" roses.

Miss Emily Groves kept the bride's book, and Miss Martha Lou Smithwick served punch. Assisting in entertaining were the members of the Marietta Garden Club, including Mesdames George Montgomery, Mark Mayes, J. M. Fowler, Harry DuPre, Stewart Shaw, of Wilmington, Del., and others. Serving were Mesdames Richard Brumby, Ted Miller, Alfred Bayless, Mitt Fitzsimmons, George Dozier, James Hancock and Misses Sara and Margaret Knott.

Thanksgiving Menu Plans

THERE is no finer way of giving thanks this year than by sharing your Thanksgiving dinner with a soldier or sailor. There are many of these boys in nearby camps and stations who would be delighted to have a festive dinner in a home atmosphere, and if you cannot have your own boy for the Thanksgiving feast, the next best thing is to have somebody else's boy!

The turkey supply is plentiful this year and unrationed and turkey or some other fowl should be the mainstay of your 1942 dinner. First let's see what shall be our menu this first Thanksgiving day in this war, then we'll get on to recipes. Spiced cider served in the living room is a pleasant traditional prelude to the big feast. To serve eight persons make it this way:

Spiced Cider.
Simmer 8 minutes, covered, 6 cups cider, 1 sliced apple, 8 whole cloves, 1 stick cinnamon, 1 teaspoon grated orange rind, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, and 14 teaspoon salt. Strain, then add 2-3 cup orange juice and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. You can make it in advance and chill it until time for serving, when it can quickly be heated. Any chilled fruit or tomato juice can be substituted for the cider if you choose, then when the guests reach the bountifully laden table the main course takes over. Here's the menu:

American Thanksgiving Dinner.
Spiced Cider or Fruit Juice (Served in Living Room)
Roast Turkey with Oyster Stuffing
Giblet Gravy
Candied Sweet Potatoes
Escalloped Cabbage
Butter
Crisp Celery
Cranberry Sauce
Stuffed Apple Salad
Pumpkin Pie
Fruit, Nuts
Coffee

To Roast a Turkey.
For the best flavor, least shrinkage and waste, roast your turkey the modern way—that is, uncovered, without water in the pan and at moderate heat. Step by step, here's what to do:

1. When turkey is dressed, rub inside cavity with salt, 1-2 teaspoon or less to each pound of turkey.
2. Place enough dressing in neck to fill it and fasten skin to back.
3. Stuff cavity well, but do not pack it tightly.
4. Tie legs close to body, then grease turkey all over with melted oil or softened unsalted fat. (Salt makes the skin blister and break.)

5. Lay in pan, on a rack preferably, breast down.
6. Cover with a fat moistened cloth, set oven at 300 to 325 and keep temperature constant.

7. As cloth becomes dry sprinkle melted fat over it or baste right through it with dripping from the pan.
8. Cut trussing string between drumsticks after about 1 hour of roasting, and when half of cooking time is up turn bird breast side up.

Stuffings.
The stuffing is the high point of the turkey meal, and since there are many stuffings to choose from I shall give only a few suggestions. Corn bread stuffing is an all-southern favorite:

Corn Bread Stuffing.
Put 1-4 cup minced onions and 1-2 cup diced celery in 4 tablespoons of fat in frying pan and simmer 5 minutes. Pour this over 4 cups of crumbled corn bread and 4 cups of day-old white or whole wheat bread. Add 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning or sage, 2 eggs beaten into a cup of hot milk and 1-3 cup melted butter or margarine. One tablespoon chopped parsley gives extra flavor. Lightly stuff the fowl, and when baked this dressing will be light and fluffy. Bake the surplus in a buttered baking dish.

Variations of this stuffing: 1 cup small oysters, 1 cup diced cooked chestnuts, 1 cup nuts and raisins. White or brown rice may be used instead of the corn bread. And a cup of browned mushrooms goes well in this dressing. Plenty of giblet gravy is an excellent side partner.

Ten-Minute Cranberry Sauce.
1 1/2 cups sugar
2 cups water
1 pound (4 cups) cranberries.
Boil sugar and water together 5 minutes. Add washed and drained cranberries and boil without stirring until skins pop open (about 5 minutes). Remove from fire and allow sauce to remain in the vessel until cool. 1 pound cranberries makes 2 1/2 pounds sauce.

Since the days when our Pilgrim Fathers hunted wild turkey for that first Thanksgiving dinner, this noble bird has had the place of honor on American tables for the feast day. Turkeys are plentiful this year and fowl is an unrationed meat. So even in wartime we can celebrate Thanksgiving with roast turkey.

Molded Strained Cranberry Sauce.
1 pound (4 cups) cranberries.
2 cups water
2 cups sugar
Cook cranberries and water until the skins pop open. Strain, add sugar and mix well. Boil rapidly for 8 to 10 minutes or until a drop jells on a cold plate. Pour into a mold and chill until firm.

Escalloped Cabbage.
1 head cabbage (medium)
2 cups grated cheese
1 1/2 cups medium white sauce
3-4 cup bread crumbs
Steam cabbage until barely tender, (about 10 minutes). Then place layer of drained cabbage in buttered baking dish, then sprinkling of cheese, then layer of white sauce. Repeat until all ingredients are used. Cover top with buttered crumbs and bake in moderate oven about 20 minutes.

Stuffed Apple Salad.
Select large red apples. Hollow them out, leaving thinnest shell possible. Cut 1-inch petals half way down shell and put apples in pan of ice water so that petals will curl back. Cut the apple taken from centers into small cubes, mix with chopped celery and grapefruit sections, add a dash of salt and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Moisten with mayonnaise and fill apple shells. Sprinkle tops with a little chopped nuts of maraschino cherry. Serve on crisp lettuce.

Old-Fashioned Pumpkin Pie.
Top off the Thanksgiving feast with thick, creamy, spicy pumpkin pie, serve slightly warm. Here's how to make it:

Sift two cups flour with 3-4 teaspoon salt. Rub in 1/2 cup shortening, then add ice water a few drops at a time to moisten it to a stiff dough. Chill dough. Then roll out and line a very deep pie plate. Filling: Mix 3 cups strained canned or cooked pumpkin with 1 cup brown sugar, 3 well-beaten eggs, 2 cups milk, 1-2 cup thin cream or evaporated milk, 1 tablespoon cinnamon, 2 teaspoon ginger, 1 teaspoon all spice, 1-4 teaspoon nutmeg, 1 1/2 teaspoons salt and 1-4 cup melted butter or margarine. Mix spices and salt, together and then mix well into pumpkin. Fill pie shell and bake 50 to 60 minutes in moderate oven, 375 degrees, reducing heat last half hour, if necessary to keep crust from getting too brown. This filling is enough for one large pie about 2 inches deep, 12 inches across.

LET US GIVE THANKS

This year God has given us great harvest. In the spirit of the First Thanksgiving, let us share our hearts and homes with someone apart from those they love. Invite a guest or two from the service. Our menu is built around the food we have in abundance, and does not include that reserved for our Armed Forces. It is ample for large gatherings but can be simplified for smaller groups.

ROAST THE TURKEY
Put breast side down at low temperature (275°F). When half done, turn on back and finish roasting. Figure 22-25 minutes per pound for a 6 to 12 pound turkey. For a 12 to 18 pound turkey allow 17 to 22 minutes per pound. If using thermometer, thrust into thick meat of thigh without touching bone. Bird will be well done when temperature is 180° or when thermometer says "well done." In any case, brown bird with a final high temperature (450°F.) for no longer than 20 minutes.

MENU IN THE MAKING
To make cocktail, bring to boil cider and spice (such as cloves, allspice, nutmeg, or cinnamon). Cool and serve.
Use honey as sugar substitute in the cranberry sauce. For the brussels sprouts: to a simple vinaigrette sauce add a clove of garlic and cook with the sauce for two minutes.

We can talk Turkey—for that bird knows no restrictions
Season inside. (Outside may blister if salted.) Stuff bird lightly, spooning in, leaving enough room for dressing to swell. Nine cups of bread (1 1/4 pounds) will stuff a 10 pound turkey. When bird is stuffed and trussed, rub with one-half cup fat mixed with one tablespoon paprika. Wrap legs and wings with cheesecloth dipped in melted fat, to prevent drying. Allow 1 pound per person

It's Almost Here!
With Thanksgiving next Thursday, do you have your grocery and meat list made out? Since the whole meal depends upon how delicious the fowl is, protect your reputation as a fine cook by ordering your Wilson's Certified Poultry today.
Poultry is plentiful, and is unrestricted. To eat poultry, at this holiday season, is patriotic. But, say I, to eat Wilson's Certified Poultry is a thing of flavor and delight and a joy to one who has always relished good food.
And now—"O Lord, accept our humble thanks. Make us worthy of thy goodness."

Observe Nutrition Week

In time of peace health plays an important part in the cultural progress and development of a nation. In time of war health of both the military and civilian population is so vital that it may be the deciding factor toward victory or defeat. It is of special significance then that this is NUTRITION WEEK. We should observe it, each of us, by making a careful checkup of our diets, being sure we are getting enough of the nutritious and protective foods to keep us in fine fighting form and spirit. Vitamin B-1 has such effect upon the digestive and nervous system it has been called the "moral vitamin." Can you not see from the far-reaching effect of that one food element it is a patriotic duty to eat properly and stay well in wartime?

At Girls' High the nurse, Mrs. Charles Jenkins, was measuring and weighing the girls this week, seeing how many could measure up to the health standards set for WAACS and WAVES. She is seen measuring Gloria Dilbeck while Martha Roberts waits her turn. Of the girls who will be graduated in January, 201 had been measured and weighed; 144 were found normal, 44 underweight and 13 overweight. This is a pretty good showing, a better average than prevails generally throughout the United States, I suspect, where, according to the National Research Council, only 25 per cent of the population gets a daily diet which is considered "good." Do your part in observing Nutrition Week.

Butterhorn Rolls.
This is a yeast mixture, but, due to the large amount of yeast, the rolls can be made and baked in about 2 to 2 1/2 hours.

Scald 1 cup milk, add 1-4 cup margarine or butter, 1-4 cup honey, 1 tablespoon sugar and 1 teaspoon salt. Let the mixture cool until it is lukewarm. Meanwhile soften 2 yeast cakes in 1-4 cup lukewarm water. Add the yeast to the cooled milk and stir in 2 or more cups sifted flour to make a soft batter. Add 2 well beaten eggs and beat until well mixed, then stir in more flour (about 1-2 to 2 cups) to make a soft dough. Knead the dough on a floured board until it is very smooth, place in a greased bowl, cover and let rise until doubled in bulk, or about 1 hour. Punch the dough down, turn out on a floured board and cut in three parts. Roll each part into a circle about one-fourth inch thick and cut each circle in sections like a pie—sections about 2 inches at the rim. Roll each wedge up beginning at the wide end. Place on a greased baking pan, let rise for 30 minutes or until doubled in bulk, brush with melted butter and bake in a moderate oven—375 degrees—for 20 to 25 minutes.

For a breakfast variation spread a thick puree of apricots or prunes between two slices of enriched bread. Dip the filled sandwich into a French toast mix and fry. Good for lunch, too.

Escalloped Oysters. For six servings, use 1 quart of small oysters with their liquid. Pick over the oysters to remove any bits of shell. Mix 1 1/2 cups fine soft breadcrumbs with 1 cup dry cracker crumbs and 1-2 cup melted butter or margarine. Parboil 1 cup sliced celery in 1 cup boiling, salted water for 15 minutes. Put a layer of crumbs in a buttered shallow baking dish, cover with a layer of oysters. Sprinkle the oysters lightly with salt, pepper and minced parsley and then add half the cooked celery. Cover the mixture with a second layer of crumbs, add the rest of the oysters, more salt, pepper and parsley and the rest of the celery. Finish with a third layer of crumbs, dot with 2 tablespoons butter or margarine and pour over the whole 1 cup oyster liquid mixed with the water in which the celery was cooked and 1 cup undiluted evaporated milk. Bake in a moderate oven—350 degrees—for about 40 minutes or until the crumbs are a golden brown. Serve hot.

Bigger And Better Breakfasts

Cooler weather sharpens appetites and makes heartier meals welcome, but the necessity for keeping in the best possible physical shape these days of stress and strain means we must consider more than quantity for the duration. A meager breakfast of black coffee and fruit juices should be out; you need stronger breakfast fare for your war activities! A good breakfast should mark the beginning of your day and by a good breakfast I mean a fruit, cereal or a hearty hot dish like pancakes or waffles or French toast, coffee or whatever beverage you prefer. Eggs may take the place of pancakes, or creamed fish flakes, bacon and fried tomatoes, or bacon crumbled in a well seasoned white sauce and poured over toast.

Pancakes are good almost any time, whether it is for a family breakfast, lunch or as dessert following a light dinner. Served with lots of hot coffee they are always sure to hit the spot, and maple syrup, honey mixed with melted butter and a little orange or lemon juice, or marmalade beaten to a liquid deliciousness simply increase their irresistible lure. Here's a good basic recipe for pancakes:

Sift 2 cups flour with 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons sugar. Beat 2 egg yolks until light, add 2 cups milk and stir into the flour mixture. Beat until smooth, then stir in 1-2 cup melted shortening. Mix well, fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and when smooth and perfectly blended, pour onto a hot griddle and cook until brown. The batter will be all right if mixed ahead of time and kept in the refrigerator.

Thick, creamy, spicy pumpkin pie served slightly warm gives traditional finish to the Thanksgiving dinner.

Estimated at $220,000, the McIntosh project calls for grading and paving 6.366 miles and construction of two bridges on the Harris Neck Airport road beginning at state route 25 near South Newport and extending to the airport.

Also added to the list of projects for the November 25 bids were two on which state funds will be used.

One calls for surfacing .623 of a mile of West Taylor street in Griffin beginning at the overhead bridge and extending toward Jonesboro, at an estimated cost of $6,000. Ex-Jap Chief Predicts Further Heavy Fighting

LONDON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—German broadcasts heard here today quoted Admiral Sankichi Takahashi, former commander-in-chief of the Japanese navy, as saying: "We must reckon with further heavy fighting in the Solomons."

The broadcast added that he declared "The Americans obviously are planning to use the Solomons as a springboard for an offensive with a view to regaining islands in the Dutch East Indies."

This radio report, based on a DNE news agency dispatch, conflicts with repeated declarations by the Tokyo radio that heavy losses in Pacific naval battles have reduced "the American fleet to impotence for offensive purposes."

American People Urged To Aid
War Effort by Staying Home

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—The Office of Defense Transportation launched a nation-wide "Don't travel" campaign today.

Joseph B. Eastman, director of ODT, said the "Don't travel" drive was designed to focus attention of the American public on the gravity of the passenger transportation problem.

"The time is here," he said, "when all the American people must understand what many of them now realize, that unnecessary travel can do real and serious harm to the war effort."

He said overcrowding on many rail and bus lines has already become serious, and with inter-city travel by passenger automobile almost out of the picture and troop movements increasing, "conditions will become much worse, unless the American public comes to the rescue."

He added that the American

'Installment Plan' Also May Be Used for Payment.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—The Treasury Department plans to collect every possible dime due it under the new wartime tax law, but it doesn't intend to turn into a shylock in the process, assistant Secretary John L. Sullivan, said today.

Sullivan said that "improvident" people who fail to plan in advance for their taxes will have to pay eventually—probably on a periodic payment basis.

He told an impromptu press conference that Internal Revenue Bureau collectors would be glad to work out paying arrangements with persons who, due to some unforeseen circumstance, were unable to pay their full tax bills on the dot.

Quered concerning the possibility of many defaults from the so-called "improvident" people, Sullivan said he felt this was not too big a problem.

"Our figures don't indicate that there's as much 'silk shirt spending' during this war as there was before," he said, adding the "silk shirt" term seemed to have become associated with unusual heavy spending.

The assistant secretary urged all persons financially able to pay their taxes in a lump sum whenever possible, without relying on the "installment plan," and said he hoped many of the payments would come in before the March deadline. He said the public's appreciation of the nation's need for money was expected to bring in an unusually large amount of lump sum tax payments early next year.

Atop Mountain

COSTILLA, N. M., Nov. 19.—(AP) Parachute supplies fed and succored nine injured crewmen of an Army bomber today while a ground crew labored up the rough slope of 12,600-foot Costilla peak where they have been stranded since Monday night.

One flyer was killed in the mountainside landing of the four-motored bomber believed to be from an air base at Salina, Kan., and the nine others were reported injured in varying degrees.

So rough is the country that Army ambulances dispatched from Kirtland Field, Albuquerque, were unable to reach nearer than 11 miles from Costilla dam, about 10 miles from the crash scene.

Two Army trucks, however, managed to get through to the reservoir, and at daybreak today ground crews, accompanied by ranchers and cowboys, started by horse and pack animal into the rugged mountain wilds.

Big RAF Bombers Again Strike Italy In Moonlight Raid

75 In House Join to Demand Gas 'Reprieve'

90-Day Postponement To Be Sought by Congressmen.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Seventy-five house members joined today in demanding a 90-day postponement of nationwide gasoline rationing and shortly afterward Speaker Rayburn disclosed he was urging high officials to defer the effective rationing date in oil producing areas pending a further study.

"I am trying to get it deferred at least until January 1," Rayburn said.

The speaker declared it was his belief that rationing of gasoline in oil-producing states, where the fuel is plentiful and the transportation problem is not involved, should be withheld until all factors can be studied. He said he had placed his request before "high officials" but declined to identify them.

His views were expressed after a telephone conversation with Representative Patman, Democrat, Texas, who was in Dallas in connection with hearings by the house small business committee of which Patman is chairman.

The 75 house members created a committee to seek compliance with their requests. Named by Representative Johnson, Democrat, Oklahoma, chairman of the committee was directed to notify Price Administrator Henderson, Rubber Administrator Jeffers, Defense Transportation Director Eastman and "possibly the White House," of the caucus action.

The committee also was instructed to meet with the House Interstate Commerce Committee next Monday when it is scheduled to take up oil and rubber problems and to draft legislation if necessary.

The members of the caucus joined unanimously in demanding the 90-day postponement. The suggestion first was made by the group back a resolution by Johnson, now pending in the house, which calls for a 90-day postponement, but the debate brought out that the resolution probably was not strong enough and therefore new legislation might be needed.

Ambassador Caffery Is Honored in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Government, business and industrial leaders honored U. S. Ambassador Jefferson Caffery at a banquet tonight.

Not one raider was lost in the 1,500-mile round trip. One of the principal targets, lighted by the moon and the RAF's shower of flares, was the Fiat airplane motor works. Also at Turin are the royal arsenal and a branch of the Caproni works.

The big industrial center on the Po river stood out like a floodlit city, the Air Ministry news service reported. At one time seven Halifaxes made their bomb runs wingtip to wingtip.

The pilot of one Halifax commented that "it was even brighter than at Genoa the night before last."

"Streets and bridges stood out clearly," he said. "We stayed around the city for about half an hour and saw the fires increase rapidly. There was plenty of flak (antiaircraft fire) at the beginning, but it died down toward the end. I didn't see a single searchlight."

A Lancaster pilot added that "buildings went up like mushrooms" as the raiders dropped their bombs—some of them the two-tonners. "A great pall of smoke hung over half the town," he said.

The Italian high command reported "considerable damage to civilian houses" and said 24 persons were killed and 52 injured. Turin last was raided two nights in succession, on October 22 and 23. Most of the raids this month have been concentrated upon Genoa.

Observers in London noted that the air war of western Europe has taken on an aspect recently of one-way traffic—toward Axis objectives. While Allied fighters and bombers have been maintaining an almost nonstop offensive, there has been no night attack against Britain for 18 nights, and no enemy plane over the country by daylight for 12 days.

Prominent Editor Had Long Record With Ledger-Enquirer.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Nov. 19.—(AP) Roger M. Page, 66, who started as a newspaper carrier for the Columbus Ledger nearly 50 years ago and advanced to editor-in-chief of the Ledger-Enquirer newspapers, died unexpectedly at his home early today.

The attack passed and he retired. Early today, he was stricken and died before members of the family could summon medical aid. Page became editor of The Ledger in 1902 and occupied this post until 1929 when he was named general manager. Other positions he held during his long service with the newspaper were those of circulation manager, secretary and vice president of the Ledger-Enquirer Company.

Army To Form All-Austrian Infantry Unit

New Battalion Is Result of Appeals by Nationals.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—A new infantry battalion in the Army of the United States to be made up entirely of citizens of Austria now living in this country will be organized as soon as possible, Secretary of War Stimson announced today.

This resulted, he told his press conference, from the appeals of many Austrian nationals for an opportunity to serve together in freeing their homeland and other nations conquered by the Axis.

"It will demonstrate to Austrians all over the world the determination of the United States to free Austria and her people from oppressive Axis control," Stimson said.

Officers of the battalion at first will be Americans of Austrian extraction, he said, but they will be replaced by Austrian nationals as rapidly as a sufficient number of enlisted men from the group can qualify for commissions at officer candidate schools.

The Army already has a battalion of Norwegian nationals, a regiment of Filipinos and a unit, formerly part of the National Guard of Hawaii, made up of men of Japanese extraction. A number of Canadians are serving with Americans in a special assault force known as the first special service force, and the Army has made citizens of friendly nations eligible for commission in the Army of the United States.

EISENHOWER JOINT!

LONDON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—American movie executives here figure that they must have given Lieutenant General Dwight D. Eisenhower quite a jolt. Two nights ago it turned out—before he left for North Africa he and his staff were invited to a private screening of some American films. The first, by sheer coincidence, was "Road to Morocco."

My Dog's Hard to Please BUT HE SURE LIKES SECURITY!

1 Our puppy never was too easy to feed so imagine how I felt when my grocer said he wouldn't have more of the canned food we'd been buying.

2 I asked at the kennel where we sometimes board Scotty. They'd been feeding Security Dog Food for years and said it contained every known mineral and vitamin normal dogs require.

3 So I got Security. For a few days I mixed it with other things Scotty was used to. Now you ought to see him go for Security, mixed with water.

4 Security sure agrees with Scotty. His eyes are bright and his coat just shines! And I'm saving money, too. Security is costing about half what I used to spend!

MADE WITH DEHYDRATED MEAT MEAL!

Are you having trouble finding a food your dog likes? Then try Security. It's not a new food—it's been on the market 10 years. Made with dehydrated meat meal, you don't have to add anything but water. Contains Vitamins A, B, B(G), D and E, minerals and niacin. In MEAL and CUBE forms, 2 and 5-lb. packages, at your grocer's.

MACON TRANSFER PROPRIETOR DECLARES POW-O-LIN RELIEVED DISTRESS THAT PLAGUED HIM

"I Wasted Lots Of Money On Medicines That Disappointed Me," Declares Mr. Foster. Tells Of Happy Relief Through Pow-o-lin. Recommends It To Friends.

Grateful for the relief Pow-o-lin gave them, well-known men and women throughout all Georgia are making voluntary statements for publication in order that others may know of their satisfaction and delight in trying this purely herbal preparation.

Mr. W. M. Foster, proprietor of a thriving transfer business, well-known resident of 109 Patterson St., Macon, Ga., declares: "It seemed every mouthful of food I swallowed hurt me with indigestion and gassy bloating that set up such pressure I often felt I couldn't get my breath. My tongue was coated and mouth so dry I felt it was full of cotton. Headaches plagued me and my nerves were jumpy. I ate so little I felt undernourished and hardly had energy to do anything. Constipation filled me with toxic wastes that made me feel achy and miserable. I took strong laxatives until I just couldn't stand another dose. I rolled and tossed at night, unable to get but little sound sleep, and morning found me so let down I didn't feel like dragging myself out of bed. I didn't know what to try next for the relief I so sorely needed. "Pow-o-lin proved just the medicine I had hoped to find. It relieved me of distress that plagued me day and night. It is a joy to eat the food I like and be relieved of the painful gas and bloating. I don't have to take harsh laxatives and get sound sleep and rest. Pow-o-lin is the best medicine I ever saw." Pow-o-lin is a purely herbal preparation for the relief of distress as plagued Mr. Foster when due to constipation. Thousands of Georgia men and women praise it. Pow-o-lin may be obtained at all Jacobs Drug Stores, $1.25 size, special, 98c. By mail, add 10c for postage.—(adv.)

Montgomery Ward Is Directed By FDR To Comply With WLB

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—President Roosevelt stepped into the row between the War Labor Board and the Montgomery Ward Company today by directing the mail order house to comply with War Labor Board order providing for a "maintenance of membership" clause in a pending union contract.

Although the company had rejected WLB order as illegal and unconstitutional, it had said if Mr. Roosevelt as commander in chief should direct it to comply, the company would obey.

Compliance Assured. President Roosevelt's order directing the huge mail order firm to comply with a War Labor Board order "will be promptly obeyed," Mr. Ward said in a letter to the union.

Six hours after President Roosevelt directed the Chicago firm to comply with the WLB order to incorporate a "maintenance of membership" clause in a contract with a labor union, Avery issued this statement:

"Ward's has received no communication from the President. If the President has written, as reported in the press, his direction will be promptly obeyed."

Compliance Essential. Mr. Roosevelt's action was taken in a letter to Avery. The letter said compliance was "essential in the interest of our war effort" and directed the board's ruling be accepted "without further delay."

The maintenance of membership clause gives company employees who are members of the union 15 days in which to resign. If they do not so within that period, they are considered bound to continue their union membership for the duration of the contract, one year.

The company argued "employees who are members of the union would not be free to resign from

Franco Wants Help Only in Case of Attack

Then He Would Accept Aid 'From Other Side.'

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Generalissimo Franco, of Spain, has informed both the Axis and the United Nations that Spain immediately would accept aid from the other side if any of her sea and air bases were seized, advises reaching the Associated Press from informed European diplomatic sources reported tonight.

Rumors of German demands from abroad and pro-German pressure at home to permit the Axis to use Spain's Mediterranean bases have flown thick and fast in Madrid and Barcelona. Nevertheless, these informed quarters said, Franco, backed by a majority of his army generals, has been sitting tight on a policy of neutrality.

There was no confirmation from European sources of a rumor that the Germans already had asked for use of the Mediterranean coast and the Balearic air bases jointly with an Italian request for the use of Balearic and coastal submarine bases.

There were, however, persistent reports that Franco acted before such requests came. The Balearic islands lie in the Mediterranean off Spain's east coast between France and North Africa.

A Madrid broadcast reported by the Federal Communications Commission said, in fact, that military maneuvers partly aimed at pelling "a supposed landing" on the Mediterranean coast opposite the Balearic islands have been completed by the Spanish army forces between Burriano and Sagunto, north of Valencia.

THEY PRACTICE WHAT THEY PREACH—For more than a year Atlanta Jaycees have waged a campaign to stamp out syphilis in Atlanta by proper examination and treatment. Sincere in their assertion that there is no stigma in being examined for the disease, the Jaycees led the way yesterday by devoting part of the luncheon meeting to taking the Kahn blood test. Dr. Alston Callahan, chairman of the anti-syphilis committee, takes a blood sample from Charlie Rolleston (seated) as Howard Fonz and H. R. Chappell await their turn.

Jaycees Take General Miller Lead in Kahn Blood Tests

Is Named to New Air Post

40 Members Examined in Fight Against Social Disease.

Forty members of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce proved that there is no disgrace in being tested for contagious syphilis by submitting to Kahn blood tests at their luncheon meeting at Davison-Paxon's tearoom yesterday.

Record of the blood tests will be kept in strict confidence, just as records are kept in Atlanta's Public Health Center No. 1 at 11 Hunter street and at community clinics throughout Fulton county. The Jaycees were assigned numbers as they lined up for the test. When the blood specimens have been scientifically checked in the laboratory of the State Board of Health to see whether they show "positive" presence of the devastating syphilis spirochete, or an absence of it, a report will be made to the Jaycee membership, so the men can check their record by number.

In announcing the group test for syphilis, Dr. William Dobes, chairman of the Jaycee public health committee, pointed out that "it is no disgrace to be examined for this dreadful disease, or to be treated for it. It can be contracted in several ways because it is a contagious disease. Since so large a percentage of Atlantans is known to be suffering from syphilis, according to city, county and state health records, it is time for everybody to be tested and help wipe out this No. 1 saboteur to Atlanta's health."

A committee of five Atlanta physicians conducted the tests of Jaycees. They included Dr. William Armstrong, of the City Health Department; Dr. John Walton, of the State Health Department; Dr. William Dobes, chairman of the Jaycee public health committee; Dr. Sterling Jernigan and Dr. Alston Callahan.

In brief remarks to the Junior Chamber group, Dr. Armstrong, who is venerable disease control officer for the city, expressed the city's appreciation for the campaign being waged jointly by the senior and junior chambers of commerce. He urged the group not to be "too impatient about rapid improvement in Atlanta's venerable disease record."

Atlanta civic leaders are being urged by the two business organizations, in a series of personal letters, to take annual physical examinations and demand that their employees take them; to insist on high school courses on venerable disease, and to seek full enforcement of local laws for confinement and treatment of persons suffering from venerable disease.

Succeeds General Frank as Head of European Service Command.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—(AP) The assignment of Major General Henry J. F. Miller, of Miami, Fla., commanding general of the Air Service Command, to head the Air Service Command in the European theater was announced today by Secretary of War Stimson.

Miller succeeds Major General Walter H. Frank, of Washington, D. C., who will take over Miller's command in this country.

"This exchange of officers," said the secretary, "is intended to make available to the headquarters, Army Air Forces, the experience of a commander fresh from a combat zone, and to give an opportunity to another general officer to gain actual combat experience."

The Air Service Command, both in the United States and in combat zones, is responsible for operation of air depots, the repair and maintenance of planes and equipment, and a continual flow of supplies and parts to operating units.

Frank, who was born at Humphrey, N. Y., April 23, 1886, has held the European Air Service Command under Major General Carl Spaatz, commanding the Army Air Forces in that theater, since July. He is a 1910 graduate of West Point.

Miller, a 1915 graduate of the military academy, was born in Salem county, N. J., September 10, 1890. He participated in the punitive expedition in Mexico in 1917, and was in England during the first World War. Returning to the United States in 1919, he participated that year in the Victory Loan flying circus and the transcontinental reliability test flight.
